SOCIALISTS SIDETRACKED

Chancellor Stresemann Forming
New German Cabinet.

SEEKS FAR REACHING POWERS

Would Have Small Cabinet Clothed With Almost Dictatorial Authority. Socialists' Attitude Virtually Assures Passage by the Reichstag of Dictatorship Law—Provisional List of Cabinet Members.

Berlin, Oct. 5.—The Socialists will be thrown overboard in the new German cabinet.

It also appears most likely that Dr. Stresemann will try to return at the head of a small cabinet clothed with almost dictatorial power, and that the reichstag will be sent about its business.

The provisional list of the new cabinet as it stands at this time is: Chancellor and foreign minister, Dr. Stresemann; defense and interior, Dr. Hugo Gessler; labor, Herr Brauns; finance and economics, Dr. Hans Luther; food administrator, Von Oppen; posts and railways, Herr Heinrichs. Von Oppen is chairman of the union of agriculturists and stands near to the German Nationalists. Heinrichs is general director of the Deutsche Werke and a noted organizer.

As soon as his list is complete Stresemann plans to submit it to the reichstag, without consulting any of the parties, and request the passage of a law conferring far-reaching powers on the new cabinet. Such a law would be equivalent to amending the constitution and hence would require a two-thirds vote.

The Socialists and Communists together could block such a vote, but Stresemann believes he has secured the virtual assurance of 54 Socialists, who refused to vote against him Wednesday, that they will refrain from voting. This would assure the passage of the dictatorship law, which he will ask.

Whatever the outcome, one thing is certain: The political tide nearly everywhere in Germany is setting strongly to the right. This is due in part to the growing feeling that German parliamentarism has failed, and in part to the uncompromising adherence by the Socialists to their dogmas. The attitude of the Socialists is largely dictated by the realization that a surrender of their principles would cause many of their numbers to flee to the Communists.

In view of the fact that only 115 of the total of 173 Socialists in the reichstag voted Wednesday and the majority against the cabinet was only seven, efforts were made toward a reconstitution of the former coalition. The Socialists balked entirely. The People's party also objected, since the strong statement in their ranks is for participation in the government by the German Nationalists.

Bavaria's uncompromising declaration of war on Marxism has plainly strengthened the war on socialism everywhere. It is learned that there is increasing sentiment in Wurtemberg for a new state cabinet, with Nationalists and without Socialists, and possibly also without Democrats.

CRABBE RENEWS DEMAND

Asks For Removal of Assistant State Welfare Director.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Attorney General Crabbe renewed his demand on Governor Donahay for an investigation of the charges filed against Assistant State Welfare Director John McNamara. Charges against McNamara were filed by Crabbe with the governor Aug. 30. No action has been taken since then by the governor. Crabbe in his second letter says: "Conditions at the Girls' Industrial school have become so deplorable that I am urged by many to again call your attention to this matter, with the hope that you will realize how serious the situation is and do something for the unfortunate girls of this institution."

McNamara, as assistant welfare director, has had direct charge of the school since Mrs. Mae E. Stannard, former matron, was removed from office, and pending appointment of a new matron.

Crabbe charged that since McNamara took over management of the institution, "cruel methods of punishment have again been resorted to" and that because of "horrible conditions obtaining" there have been 204 escapes from the institution.

TO MEET AT DENVER

Republican National Committeeman to Hold Regional Conference.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Republican national committee officials began a pilgrimage to Denver, where on Oct. 11 and 12 the series of regional conferences with state leaders, preliminary to the 1924 presidential campaign, will be resumed. These conferences were inaugurated early in the summer, but were broken off after President Harding's death. Prior to that time meetings had been held in Boston, Cincinnati and Chicago. After the Denver conference similar sessions will be held at Minneapolis, Seattle, San Francisco and Richmond, Va. Chairman John T. Adams led the vanguard for the Denver convocation. The Denver meeting will mark the first definite step in an aggressive campaign which has been determined upon by the Republican managers to swing the west in 1924. The Minneapolis, Seattle and San Francisco conferences will be important for the same reason.

To Build Big Theater.

Youngstown, O., Oct. 5.—The B. F. Keith interests will erect a theater and building here estimated to cost approximately $1,450,000. It was announced. The building will extend on Wick avenue between Central square and Commerce street, and according to present plans will have a seating capacity of 2,300.

CARRY THE FIGHT TO GOVERNOR

Friends Demand an Arrest in Case of Mrs. Gertie Webb.

SMITH TO TAKE UP MATTER

Claim Made That Mrs. Webb, After She Had Been Told She Was Dying, Made a Statement That She Had Been Poisoned and Named the Person Who Had Given Her the Poison. Expert's Report Awaited.

New York, Oct. 5.—The fight for an arrest in the death of Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb, who is said to have been poisoned, has been carried to Albany by friends of the dead woman, who will ask Governor Smith to intervene in the investigation.

The friends of Mrs. Webb base their action on the fact that they claim Mrs. Webb, after she had been told she was dying, had made a statement that she had been poisoned and named the person who had given her the poison.

It is said that when Dr. William J. Meyer told Mrs. Webb she was dying she called to her the woman nurse, Mrs. Robert F. Johnstone, a friend since girlhood, and Dr. Meyer and in their presence made the statement she had been poisoned. It is held by legal advisers of the friends of the dead woman that this constituted a binding dying declaration within the intent of the law and that an arrest should follow. If the district attorney of Westchester county does not order an arrest, Governor Smith will be asked to act, as he did in the Ward case, they said.

The governor said he thought it was going to be a too common practice, the asking of the state to intervene in cases where the district attorney is empowered to act, but that he would take up the matter with Mrs. Webb's relatives and friends.

The complete report of Dr. Alexander Gettler, who examined the viscera of Mrs. Webb, and discovered traces of poison, will be given to the Westchester county grand jury probably Monday, when it will be made public. His examination so far has revealed poison, but not enough to have caused death.

It was announced also that Dr. Meyer, Mrs. Johnstone, Judge and Mrs. John F. McIntyre, George Taylor, A. B. Edgar, Francis Irwin, Dr. Ernest F. Krug and Dr. Davenport West, all of New York, will be called as witnesses before the grand jury. "I want every possible witness to give every possible fact about this peculiar case to the grand jury," District Attorney Rowland said.

GUARD MAY EMPLOY TANKS IN ATTACK

Convict Murderers Still at Bay
in Kentucky Prison.

Eddyville, Ky., Oct. 5.—Driven to desperate measures by the stubborn resistance offered by the three rebel convict murderers, Monte Walters, Lawrence Griffith and Henry Ferland, who have been besieged in the dining hall of the prison here since they attempted to shoot their way to freedom, a sortie that has cost the lives of three guards and the injury of two others, prison officials and national guard officers are determined to capture the convicts either dead or alive, even if it means tearing down the building stone by stone.

Besieged from all sides by Kentucky national guardsmen, prison guards and volunteers from the surrounding country, the convicts were at bay today in the brick ovens of the Kentucky penitentiary dining room. They have but one chance in a million to make their way over the walls, but should they do so they could traverse many miles in any direction without leaving the cover of forests and thickets.

It was rumored here that a request might be made for army tanks to be sent to the scene. If the tanks are used these moving forts could be pushed to the door of the dining hall and a devastating grenade fire directed from their fighting tops. A barrage was directed against the dining room. A machine gun was also brought into play upon the building.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Taft Explains Tax Act.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Taft taxation bill, which will be voted on in a referendum at the November election, was explained and defended by its author, Representative Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, at a meeting of the Roosevelt Republican club here. Purposes of the Taft bill, its author said, are: Restriction of the high cost of government by limiting expenditures, intelligent restriction of expenditures through budget control, a pay-as-you-go plan with respect to incurring public debts, a wider home rule as to current expenses.

Beetham Undecided.

Cadiz, O., Oct. 5.—Rupert R. Beetham, former speaker of the Ohio house of representatives, is undecided whether he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next year. This was indicated in a statement given out here in which he commented on the possibilities for the 1924 race. He was a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1922.

Impersonated Dry Officer.

Cleveland, Oct. 4.—Three men, displaying badges and representing themselves to be prohibition agents, entered the soft drink establishment of John Jarkiewicz here, and five minutes after searching it and his home upstairs disappeared with $4,800, his life's savings. Jarkiewicz had drawn the money from the bank to purchase the property he is occupying.

Safety Director Accused.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—A delegation of Canton citizens bearing complaints against Safety Director Edward E. Curtis of Canton, against whom charges of failure to enforce the prohibition laws had been filed, appeared before Governor Donahay. The latter reserved his decision with reference to calling a formal hearing on the charges.

Forged Liquor Blanks Out.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Federal Prohibition Director J. E. Russell sent letters to all druggists in Ohio warning them against counterfeit prescription blanks, pointing out in what respects they are different from the genuine. The signatures of the physicians on the prescription blanks are forged and the druggists are urged to scrutinize the signatures carefully.

Referee Reverses Decision.

Columbus, Ga., Oct. 5.—Claiming that he had been intimidated by the promoters and was forced to change his original decision of a draw to one in favor of Young Stribling of Georgia, Harry Ertle, referee of the Stribling-Mike McTigue bout here, said that his original verdict of a draw should stand. Under the latest statement of Ertle, who refereed the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, McTigue remains light heavyweight champion of the world, the title won when he defeated Battling Siki in Dublin. When Ertle made his first decision, a draw, the crowd stormed around the ring and, according to Ertle, threatened violence if he did not change the verdict.

Shooting Follows Quarrel.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Following a quarrel, Mrs. Austin, 25, colored, was shot and killed by her husband, Will Austin, 27. Mrs. Austin died an hour after the shooting, being shot through her body.

BOOM WALTON FOR SENATOR

Supporters to Pit Him Against Senator Owen.

PRELIMINARY STEPS TAKEN

Bitterest Factional Spirit Ever Known Now Prevailing in Oklahoma—Grand Jury to Probe Governor's Appointment of "Secret Service Men"—Other Developments in the Oklahoma Muddle.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 5.—What promises to be the most colorful political battle ever staged in the southwest will be put on in Oklahoma next year and very likely with Governor John Calloway Walton, if he is alive at that time, making the race for United States senator.

The boom for Walton to succeed Senator Owen already is on, with pledges of support from all sections of the state.

The preliminary steps in the senatorial campaign are being taken with the bitterest factional spirit prevailing ever known here. Households are divided, lifelong friendships have been shattered, and men of complacent mien all their lives are now carrying six shooters. Many ministers have become militant vicars of the Nazarene, with the "flaming sword" as their inspiration. Religious prejudice has divided congregations all over the state.

In this surcharged atmosphere, with hatreds comparable to the hates of the civilian populations of France and Germany during the war, the Walton people have accepted the challenge and will go ahead immediately with their plans for capturing the senatorial nomination. There probably will be at least four Democratic candidates for the nomination in the primary, with the main battle centering around Walton and Senator Owen who will seek a re-nomination, according to his friends.

Republican leaders, meantime, see a chance to cop another Republican senator from this state and possibly the electoral vote, with the Democratic forces so badly shattered. The factional strife, however, caused by the "invisible empire" is not confined to the Democrats. It also is smashing the hegemony of the G. O. P. ranks in all parts of the commonwealth.

A petition asking grand jury investigation of Governor Walton's appointment of "secret service men" was granted by Judge T. W. Clark in district court. The petition had been secured by Campbell Russell. A grand jury was called for October 15, and names of grand jury men were drawn.

By mutual agreement a suit brought by sixty-eight legislators to restrain Adjutant General Baird H. Markham, commander of the Oklahoma City military forces, from attempting to prevent a called session of the house of representatives was continued in Judge James I. Phelps' court, subject to 48-hour call from either side.

ENGLISH LEADER HEARD

Says High Wages Means Prosperity For the Nation.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 5.—High wages mean a high standard of living for the worker in every line of endeavor, and prosperity for the nation. This statement was made here in a speech delivered to the convention of the American Federation of Labor by Frank Hodges, secretary of the coal miners' federation of Great Britain and secretary of the international federation of coal miners of the world, of which the United Mine Workers of America is an integral part. Mr. Hodges said that in Great Britain the standard of living was much lower than in the United States, and the reason, he said, was because the labor movement in this country has concentrated on keeping wages at the maximum. This policy, he said, has largely eliminated unemployment. It will be followed in the future by the labor movement in his country, he indicated.

HARVEY AND CHILD QUIT

Resignations of Ambassadors to Great Britain and Italy Accepted.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The resignations of Col. George Harvey, ambassador to Great Britain and Richard Washburn Child, ambassador to Italy, have been tendered to President Coolidge and will become effective about January 1, 1924.

Colonel Harvey will remain at his London post for a month or six weeks longer, according to present plans, and return to the United States on leave of absence. Ambassador Child is scheduled to leave Rome this week. He also will be given leave of absence until his resignation takes effect.

Both resignations originally were offered to President Harding, just before his Alaskan trip. President Harding very reluctantly agreed to accept them, and President Coolidge is ratifying the pledge given by his predecessor. The reason given in each instance was that of "pressing personal business."

Among those prominently mentioned for the London post are Charles B. Warren, William M. Collier, Ambassador to Chile, Frank W. Stearns, Henry P. Fletcher and John Hays Hammond.

Pinned Under Machine.

Warren, O., Oct. 5.—George Swan of Cleveland was killed instantly and two companions seriously injured in an automobile accident at Southington, near here. The accident happened on a curve. The car overturned and landed in a ditch. Swan was pinned under the machine and was dead when taken out.

ARMY MAKES CLEAN SWEEP

Wins First, Second and Third Place In Thrilling Aerial Race.

St. Louis, Oct. 5.—The army swept the field in the most thrilling aerial spectacle yet staged in this country by taking first, second and third places in the Liberty engine builders' trophy race, for military planes only, with a marine plane finishing fourth.

The average speed of the winner, Lieutenant C. McMullen, piloting a Pooker, was 139.03 miles an hour. Lieutenant H. K. Ramey, in a De Havilland standard, second, averaged 137.74. Lieutenant L. H. Smith, in Co-5, was third, with 135.35 miles an hour. This time broke the record established last year when Lieutenant T. J. Koenig piloted a plane at 128.8 miles an hour.

Walter E. Lees, averaging a fraction less than 90 miles an hour, won the flying club race. Captain Burt E. Skeel, army pilot, averaging 143 miles an hour, won the Mitchell trophy.

A Stride of Twenty-Five Feet.
The average ostrich can outrun the best Arab horse, if the bird will continue on a straight-away course. The fact that wild ostriches like to run in circles invariably leads to capture, as a well-trained Arabian horse will follow the shortest course, knowing that ultimately the fleeing ostrich will turn in his direction. In full flight the adult ostrich often shows a stride of 20 to 25 feet, which affords one explanation of its remarkable speed.—Nature Magazine.

Washable Paper.

Many possible uses suggest themselves for a special paper recently produced and patented by a Japanese inventor. The paper is said to be reasonably strong and can be crumpled up and washed with soap and water. So durable is this paper that it can be used as a covering for umbrellas and, when soiled, can be easily cleansed at home. As a wrapping paper, it could be used over and over, being washed when soiled. It is said that the product can be made at a reasonable price. It has a texture somewhat like cloth, and is not to be confused with oiled paper.

SCIENTIST HAS NARROW ESCAPES

Chinese Bandits Endanger Life of Washington Plant Specialist.

ENTIRE TOWN IS WIPED OUT

Dangerous adventures and narrow escapes from bandits are befalling Joseph F. Rock, Washington scientist, who entered Yunnan province, China, on a quiet search for plants, but now faces dangers from which, he writes, "God knows where I will emerge."

Mr. Rock went to the remote Burma-Tibet frontiers of China as head of a National Geographic society expedition which hoped to bring back numerous plants for American introduction, study the mystery of how American native corn apparently was transplanted there before 1492, and to seek a blight-resisting chestnut tree. He is the man who found the chaulmoogra trees, oil from which is used to treat leprosy.

From Likliangfu, China, he writes, under date of June 11:

"I just returned from an exciting trip to the Lachimling salt mines. "Money is dreadfully scarce, paper is useless as no one will take it, especially up here with all these tribes-people."

"I decided to risk it and make a dash for Lachimling. In the heart of the wildest mountain ranges imaginable, to get funds to carry on the work and to see me through to wherever God knows where I will emerge."

"I had four Chinese drafts on the Lachimling salt mines from the Tai Salt office."

Official Feared for His Life.

"At first the Likliang official refused to give me an escort and said he feared for my life and would not let me go. Finally I said I must have money and I would risk it. He gave me two opium-soldiers, disreputable wretches of soldiers as escorts. They were simply a nuisance and an expense. They were, of course, only to go as far as the next magistrate which is at Chien Chican."

"There I got four soldiers as far as Lauping. Lauping is not on any map as it is in unsurveyed territory. At Lauping which is five days west from Likliang, I got five soldiers and thence we started out through the wildest country imaginable to Lachimling. Dense forests, deep ravines, high mountain passes, the loveliest and weirdest imaginable. I was not afraid going to Lachimling, but I feared the return trip with about $4,000 in silver in the trunks."

"I took seven of my Meso men along and five soldiers from Lauping, besides myself, so we were thirteen people in all. We reached Lachimling safely and had no trouble to get the money. I had to go at the end of the month to arrange it so that I would reach the mines on the first, which I did."

"It is especially at this time that the roads are watched by the brigands, as usually on such dates money is dispatched. I was told at Taihu to arrange to be at the mines about the first of the month. It is exceedingly difficult to keep things secret. We had no sooner arrived in Lachimling than everybody knew why we came. I did not stay longer than I had to to prevent the news traveling faster than we did, so I left the next morning with an additional escort from Lachimling. Thanks to the gods I reached Likliang without mishap."

"I put four scoundrels into the jail in Lauping where they got a beating, as they tried to foul me, but I got ahead of them and so here I am safe with the cash with which to carry on."

Entire Town Wiped Out.

"On my trip up the Yangtze and the Yundodye river toward Chungtien, I met the Grand Lama on the road who informed me that not a house has been left standing in Chungtien. The whole place has been burned and the Chinese official flew to Likliang where he is at present. Two thousand Tibetan bandits are at Hsiao Chuntien, five days north of Likliang. What will happen no one knows."

"I had a letter from the customs commissioner. He tells of the Tenguieh magistrate having been captured by brigands, and a ransom is asked of $20,000. It is certainly a problem how to get out of this country without losing one's life or all his belongings. However, our collecting goes on apace as if it were the most peaceful place in the world."

"ALPINE LIGHT" AS A CURE

Reproduction of Sun's Rays Used in Tuberculosis.

The use of the "Alpine Light" in the treatment of tuberculosis is being tried in the X-ray department of Franklin Square hospital in Baltimore. In a number of cases, according to Dr. S. C. Bowers, director of the department, the patients have shown remarkable improvement.

The "Alpine light" makes it possible to reproduce, scientifically, the sun bath which have been found so beneficial at tuberculosis sanatoria in the Alps. One man who has been accustomed to go to the mountains every spring, Dr. Bowers said, has gained twenty-five pounds through the "Alpine light" treatment in two months. Tuberculosis of the bones or any other part of the system, as well as of the lungs, the doctor explained, may be treated in this way.

An Artist's Problem.

Of course, an artist's whole problem must be, as Carlyle wrote to me, the expressing with articulate clearness, the thought in him—I am almost inclined to say that clear expression should be his only work and care, for he is born, ordained, such as he is—and not born learned in putting what was born in him into words—whatever can be clearly spoken out to be. But "bricks and mortar" is very easily said, and some of the thoughts in "Sordello" not so readily. . . . I sin forty times in a day by light words and untrue to the thought.—Robert Browning.

Seed Cheapest Way to Increase Corn Yields

Best Place to Make Selection Is From Farm Yields.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Corn yields can be increased more surely and cheaply by the use of good seed than in any other way, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Unless a community has an experienced and honest corn breeder, the best place for the farmer to get seed corn is from the fields on his farm or in his neighborhood which were planted with a variety that has proved successful in the locality. The time for selecting seed corn in the field is almost here and preparations for handling the seed should soon be under way.

In selecting corn for seed, the ears should be taken from stalks which yield best in competition with others. Picking the seed corn direct from the field will give the farmer a chance to do this, and also to get ears that are free from disease and hang at a height convenient for husking. Drooping ears which shed rain readily usually will give the best seed, while in the South it is necessary to choose ears that are well protected from insects by a long, tight husk covering.

The same day the seed is gathered it should be hung in a dry, airy place. One of the best ways to cure seed corn is to hang it from the rafters of a barn or open shed, care being taken to see that it is thoroughly dry before there is danger of freezing. After it is well cured, store the corn in a dry place where it will not be damaged by mice, rats, birds and insects. The corn that produces the best crop is cheapest in the long run and care in selecting and handling seed corn will be more than repaid by increased yields.

Cut Corn for Silage as Lower Leaves Drop Off

Opinions differ as to the best time to cut corn for silage. While the largest yield of food nutrients will be obtained if the corn is permitted to mature fairly well, it should not be too ripe for the reason that it will not pack so well in the silo and is more likely to mold. It may also be somewhat indigestible if fully matured.

Andrew Boss, vice director of the Minnesota experiment station at University farm, says that as a safe working plan one should begin cutting corn for silage when three or four of the lower leaves dry up and drop off. Then the corn will usually be in the milk or hard dough stage and some of the early ears will be glazed or dented. Silage made under these conditions will be at its best for dairy cows.

But for beef cattle, says Professor Boss, the corn should be left in the fields until fully dented unless perchance a severe drouth or hot spell has dried out the corn prematurely. Beef cattle feeders prefer better developed ears and greater maturity of the plant than do those who put up ensilage for dairy cows.

Best Variety of Fowls for Beginner to Raise

Perhaps the most frequent question asked of the poultryman is this: "What is the best variety of poultry to raise?" It generally depends upon the chicken man to whom you address your question as to what the reply will be. If he raises White Plymouth Rocks himself, he will quite naturally be inclined to tell you that Plymouth Rocks of the white variety are the best fowls to raise; if you happen to ask the question of a Barred Plymouth Rock fancier, then in all probability it will be Barred Rocks that you must raise to succeed, and should you ask the question of a Rhode Island Red enthusiast, why then there is absolutely nothing to it—Reds always were and always will be the best breed. And so it goes all along the line—White Wyandottes, White, Black and Buff Orpingtons, White and Brown Leghorns, Anconas, White and Black Minorcas, Golden and Silver Campines and even Blue Andalusians—yes, these and all the others unmentioned have supporters somewhere who will tell you that your success is assured if you select the one best variety and each will name a different one.

Take Good Care of All Early Hatched Pullets

Take good care of the early hatched pullets. Sell most of the young cockerels, as soon as possible, but hold on to the pullets and keep them for winter laying. The hens older than two years had best be disposed of at once unless they possess some special merit for which you desire to carry them over another winter. As a general rule, it is well to keep the flock young and vigorous. Hens will lay just as well without males as with them, and it is an inexcusable mistake to carry over winter a lot of surplus roosters. Get rid of them at once.

Wheat Is Satisfactory Ration for Brood Sows

Wheat makes a fair feed for sows if fed with other feeds in the ration containing better balanced protein and the necessary minerals. Brood sows must not be allowed to become too fat and should not be allowed a ration consisting almost entirely of wheat. If carefully watched and given some supplement such as a legume or tankage the wheat will be very satisfactory.

TO WIPE OUT SALOONS

Pinchot to Start Injunction Proceedings in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—Following a tour of Philadelphia's saloons, Governor Pinchot announced that he is more determined than ever to wipe out the 1,300 open bars of the city. He will use the "padlock" provision of the law if the saloons refuse to quit selling intoxicants. The governor said: "If saloonkeepers and owners of 1,300 properties where these public nuisances are maintained desire them abated by injunction, so that their properties are closed for a year for any business purpose, their desires shall be gratified. The saloons and the interests behind them can no longer defy the constitution and the federal and state statutes." It was learned that the governor's forces planned to start injunction proceedings in court next week.

SCAR TELLS WOMAN'S AGE

Use of Vaccination Mark, Bared by Sleeveless Gowns, Shows Period of Inoculation.

Twenty years ago when the popular wave of smallpox vaccination swept the land, and when every school girl bared her arm for the medical process that necessitated a permanent scar, it is probable that neither mothers nor doctors foresaw the coming of the present-day fashions in sleeveless gowns.

Those were the days of trailing skirts, bustles, long sleeves and high feminine collars, and when the doctor inquired of the solicitous mother as to where he should put the mark upon the little girl the mother felt quite safe in choosing a position so well concealed as the upper arm.

Few mothers of those days could believe that a scar upon the arm well up toward the shoulder would ever find its way into the light of public attention, but the passing of years, with the consequent changing of styles, has brought about circumstances that were unexpected, and the marks are at last out in the open, exposed to the gaze of whoever cares to look.

Observing persons assert they have little difficulty in telling the age of a young woman merely by noting the kind and size of vaccination scar. The doctors at one time thought it necessary to make marks the size of a half dollar, but with the passing of years they became smaller and smaller until now a scratch that is almost invisible is all the process requires. The girl whose vaccination mark corresponds to the size of a dime belongs to a different period from the girl with the nickel mark, the quarter mark or the half-dollar mark, and with the donning of the sleeveless gown she feels that her age is stamped indelibly upon her.

The modern physician's system marks an advance in surgical science that will be appreciated by the debaucheante a decade or so hence.

BOYS OF 1,400 YEARS AGO

Field Museum at Chicago Has Beautiful Chinese Painting Which Shows Youngsters at Play.

In a room of Chinese art relics in the Field Museum of Natural History at Chicago hangs a curious, beautiful painting on silk, called "A Hundred Boys at Play." It is a panel, many yards long, which was made during the Sung period of Chinese history, about 1,400 years ago, by an artist named Su Hanchen.

There you may see a hundred Chinese boys busily occupied with indoor and outdoor pastimes. And from the expressions on their little painted faces it seems that they are about as busily and joyously happy at their play as boys of the present day. The interesting part is to see that the games they played in China so long ago were the same sort that boys play now.

Those boys even seemed to know a form of football, for you see boys scrambling for a kicked ball. Others are wrestling, shooting at targets, playing war and amusing themselves with fighting crickets. Still others are engaged in less active sports, such as playing chess, riding hobby horses, flying kites, dancing and playing the organ and lute.

On one bank sits a boy with a fishing pole. Across from him a Chinese friend has set up a store and is a merchant.

Disillusioned.

She had come to New York to study art. She was only sixteen, and when she heard that her roommate was to be a Spanish girl she was thrilled. She was really seeing life, to be in New York and to have a romantic, ardent Spaniard for a roommate. Perhaps she would even stab a lover or two.

The Woman saw the young girl the other day.

"And your roommate? Is she exciting?" the Woman asked.

"Exciting," sneered the girl, "anything but! She practices scales so diligently I feel as though I'll go mad, and she's so proper and modest that she even wears high-necked and long-sleeved nightgowns made of thick cotton."—New York Sun and Globe.

Powdered "Pharaoh" Wanted.

Powdered "Pharaoh" was one of the sovereign remedies of medieval times. It cured wounds. It was made into salves and balsams. It was swallowed as a physic. It formed the basis of all the black arts.

Othello's handkerchief owed its magic power to dyes made from mummified maidens' hearts. The witches in "Macbeth" gave potency to their charmed brew by adding powdered mummy. To such an extent was tomb-robbing carried on even in ancient times that mummies of the great kings were taken from their own tombs and hidden away in secret places, while proxies were left in their stead.—Detroit News.

The Honest Neighbor.

At dusk a suburbanite headed sheepishly across to the next abode, called out the occupant and said: "Mr. Wombat, I want to return your lawn mower."

Wombat declined to take it, whereupon the other man was much perturbed.

"I know I have kept it a long time," he murmured. "Pardon me and let me return it."

To which Wombat responded: "I must be honest with you. I had only one lawn mower and neighbors have already returned six."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

W. G. HARDING ENROLLS.

The long line of students before the registrar's office at Ohio State university was held up for several minutes while officials rubbed their eyes and stared at an enrollment card bearing the name, "Warren G. Harding."

The card had been presented by a nephew and namesake of the late editor-president, who, apparently desiring to follow in the footsteps of his distinguished uncle, entered the college of commerce and journalism.

Warren is a son of Dr. George T. Harding Jr., of Worthington, Ohio. He has been pledged by the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Registration at the university has passed the 8,000 mark. Officials expect it to reach 8,400 for the full quarter.

Henry Hudson's Fate.

The first navigators who sailed on voyages of discovery to the new world had no easy task to control the adventurous crews who manned their vessels. The troubles that Columbus had to face are well known. Magellan was called upon to put down mutiny among the crew and rebellion among his officers. But to Henry Hudson, discoverer of the river that bears his name, fell the sad fate of being overpowered by mutineers and sent to certain doom at sea. The year following his discovery of Hudson river bay and Hudson strait, his crew rebelled, and seizing Hudson and eight others, bound them and set them adrift in a small boat on Hudson bay, June 23, 1611. They were never heard from again.

Lightning's Pranks.

Lightning plays pranks which are not so easily explained. Some years ago a Russian steamer crossing the Black sea was struck by lightning three separate times within seven minutes. Though set on fire, her crew managed to put out the flames and get her back to port. A wheat ship on Lake Huron was struck twice within three minutes, each time in the same spot. The second flash set her on fire and she sank.

Good Name Beyond Price.

Garments that have once one rent in them are subject to be torn on every nail, and glasses that are once cracked are soon broken; such is man's good name once tainted with just reproach. —Bishop Hall.

Identifying Her.

Donald had a new pair of tan shoes of which he was very proud. He came in the house one day after playing with two little girls, one of whom had tan hair, and said, "Mother, the girl with the tan hair is very cross."

Dramatic Power.
The first thing that strikes any one who has tried to read Jane Austen's novels aloud is the dramatic power displayed in the conversations. No novelist ever made his or her characters express themselves so simply or forcibly in their parts as she does. It would seem that we have lost in her one of our greatest playwrights. The unfolding of character in dialogue has not been better done by any of our dramatists, and has certainly not been approached by any other novelist. No novels make so immediate an appeal when declaimed as hers do. Even youthful audiences who are popularly supposed to be incapable of appreciating the subtlety of her wit are quickly entranced.—S. P. B. Mals.

Earth's Age Is "Set."
After long investigation, scientists have announced that the earth has been in about its present state for two or three billion years. Geological measurements previously made were all lost in a maze of time before they had traced the history of the planet beyond 100,000,000 years. The present discovery rests on the rate by which radioactive substances change form. These materials are not permanent, but in time turn into lead.—Popular Mechanics.

BALL GAME

Bad Blood at Harrisburg-Commercial Point High School Contest.
Residents of Harrisburg and Commercial Point are all worked up over a rumput over a baseball game. It seems that the trouble started when one John Kell Sr. aged 74 of Harrisburg, a bus driver, who had accompanied his son, John Kell Jr., to a game played at Commercial Point, Friday, September 28, between Harrisburg and Scioto township centralized schools. There seems to have been a little rivalry and bad feeling between the opposing teams and in the sixth inning Young Kell Jr., was hit by a pitched ball and this was the start of the trouble. The game was broken up and the Harrisburg players started to return home. In their going, it is said John Kell Sr., threw a rock which hit one of the Commercial high school students. He was placed under arrest after a chase of five miles and was taken before Justice A. A. Miller, where he answered to the charge of assault and battery. Mr. Kell plead not guilty and was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $300.

VISITS BOYHOOD HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. George Rowland, of Greenwich, Connecticut, are in the city, stopping at The Boggs. Mr. Rowland's boyhood days were spent in this city and this is his first visit here in 65 years. He is much interested in visiting the scenes where he spent many happy hours so long ago.

His father was Rev. James Rowland, pastor of the First Presbyterian church from 1844 until 1854. At the time of his death his remains were buried under the belfry and now repose under the tower of the new church.

Bible's Only French Word.

The only French word in the Bible is "bruit," meaning a noise or disturbance. It occurs in Jeremiah 10:22, and the reason it got there was because Norman-French was the official language at the time of the Bible's first translation into English.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"I have a friend just back from England" said the Hotel Stenographer. "She tells me that over there that almost every day is a half holiday. Nobody works Monday or Saturday, for they are weekends and everybody stops two or three times a day for tea." "Is that so?" asked the House Detective. "No wonder they couldn't ever get along with their Irish neighbors." "Never mind, Kelly, pretty soon we will all be like that parable in the Bible, where everybody loafs and fishes. We got us a Labor day when nobody works and we got us a Saturday that in the summer has grown from a half holiday to a whole one. "We got us a Mothers' day and a Memorial day and Independence day, and a lot of other days to motor and play golf so we can have respect for our mothers and our soldiers and our liberty."

"We got us a Christmas day when everybody buys things they can't afford and gives them to people who do not want them."

"We begin the new year on a New Year's day, which is a holiday just to show that we do propose to work ourselves to death that year."

"Now I see that some women have started a movement to get a mother-in-law day when everybody who has a mother-in-law will wear a pink rosebud and try to wear an expression which indicates that life is fleeting and death sure."

"Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, says that in a few years improved machinery will fix it so none of us will have to work over four hours a day. Maybe he is right about it, but, Kelly I get to get out these letters some time this afternoon, and if you do not beat it away from here and stop talking to me I am not going to get done before 5 o'clock."

FROSTY MORNING.

The thermometer hit the 30 degree mark Thursday night. It was the coldest so far this season and it began to grow colder shortly after noon when the thermometer registered 64. Nearly everything in the vegetation was covered with a white hoary frost. Bean vines were scorched badly and a thin sheet of ice formed on water in low places.

How Women Mail Letters.

Femininity has its own way of posting a simple, everyday letter, according to one keen observer. For instance, out of 30 women who were watched at a street letter box in the residential section of a large city, 21 withdrew the letter before quite letting go of it, to scan both sides of the envelope, to be certain the letter was securely sealed, properly addressed, stamped and to make sure nobody could look through the envelope to read the contents.

AMUSEMENTS

One of the most entertaining photo-plays presented at the Met theater this season is "Your Friend and Mine" a screen version of the stage hit by Willard Mack, with the author in the role he played on the stage. It has all the elements that go to make a film of genuine satisfaction. Story acting, settings and direction are all of the highest order, leaving nothing to be desired.

"Your Friend and Mine," tells of the plans of a celebrated author to show up the evil intentions of a bogus artist. The latter is in love with the wife of the author's friend and the husband is ignorant of the artist's true feeling toward his wife. The author reads to the wife, in the presence of the artist the manuscript of a play which he has written. It is concerned with a situation in which all are involved; and its dramatic climax is so impressive as to defeat the schemes of the artist.

Willard Mack in his usual self in the author's role. Enid Bennett does well as the neglected wife and Huntly Goddon is admirable as her husband. The artist is carefully played by J. Herbert Frank. Others of importance are Rosemary Theby, Otto Lederer and Aileen Ray.

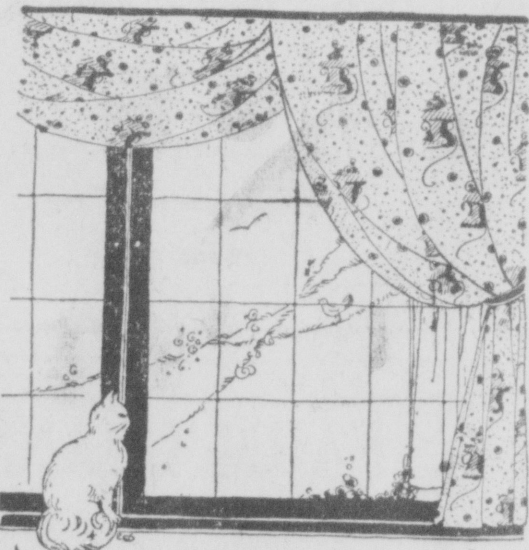

The excellent direction of the photography is the work of Clarence G. Badger. The photography was produced by SL Pictures (Sawyer-Lubin) and released by Metro Pictures Corporation. It was adapted by Winifred Dunn from Mr. Mack's play. The photography is the work of Rudolph Bergquist.

No Man Always Right.

The man who is always right does not live. He is still the prospective product of the development of the species. Even the one who generally thinks he is right will be found frequently to draw wrong conclusions, but he's safer to follow.—Grit.

TRAVELER FAILS TO FIND BIGGEST THING IN LIFE.

Globe Trotter Obtains 57 Pounds of Names in 21 Years

Cleveland, O.—Josef F. Mikulec has wandered over 200,000 miles seeking "The Biggest Thing in Life."

And after twenty-one years of globe trotting and autograph collecting, he isn't sure but what he might have found the object of his search right at home in California.

"I have visited kings and queens, presidents, governors and notables in all lands. I have seen every country and every city; have traveled when and where I pleased—but I have missed the biggest thing in life," he says sadly.

"The biggest thing? Companionship—real companionship."

"I meet scores of people every day. But they aren't interested in me and I can't get the opportunity to become interested in them. They want to know of my travels, and I've got to tell it all over again."

"When the day is done, I haven't anyone I can sit down and talk with as one friend talks with another. And that is the biggest thing in life."

Every one knows Mikulec. President Harding once met him. So has Woodrow Wilson, the Prince of Wales, J. P. Morgan, the late Teddy Roosevelt, and hundreds of others of equal note.

Twenty-one years ago—he's forty-five now—Joe left his home in Croatia, a province of Hungary. He's been walking ever since, through a score of nations and every state in the United States.

Now he wants a little farm somewhere in his adopted country. He sees a wheat field, or maybe rows of corn and tomatoes and plows and horses and chickens—and neighbors.

Joe's autograph book weighs 57 pounds now. Names that would amaze you are written in it. Just about every world character except John D. Rockefeller and the King of England. He uses a little wagon to carry the book, it is so heavy. For many years, however, he carried it, but it wasn't that big then. He increases it as it fills.

Joe wants to see his book finally placed in a museum or library. He hopes someone will buy it for that purpose.

Price? He won't say, but he does add that what it brings will buy the farm and have plenty left over to tide him through the remainder of this life with friends.

Effects of Late Empress

Bring $10,000 at Auction

London.—Members of England's oldest and highest families stood with almost tearful eyes when the once priceless effects of the late Empress Eugenie of France were sold under the hammer at ridiculously small prices, but still beyond their impoverished purses. The goods sold were principally her late majesty's dresses, slippers, gowns, laces and furs.

Most of the stuff was bought by dealers, although some of the former empress' servants and followers were able to buy small articles.

The 100 lots brought about $10,000, which would hardly have paid for one of the court gowns worn at the royal festivities in the days of splendor.

A lot of rare Alencon lace brought $1,115, and a fur stole $255. A beautiful rug into which was woven the royal cipher with the arms of Spain and France, given to the empress on her wedding day by the carpetmakers of Seville, was bought by a Frenchman and will be presented to a French museum. It is supposed to have been on this rug that the Emperor Napoleon III and empress knelt when they received the blessing after their marriage.

Cat Braves Flames to

Return to Her Kittens

New York.—Loyalty to a litter of kittens, it is believed, caused a large maltrese cat rescued by firemen from the Towers Warehouse, Inc., at West and Watt streets, to break away from her rescuers on the sidewalk and dart back into the burning building.

It was presumed the cat had the kittens hidden in a part of the warehouse untouched by fire or smoke, but firemen who went back into the building after her could not locate cat or kittens.

Girl Breaks Her Arm Saving Drowning Boy

St. Paul, Minn.—With one arm broken at the wrist, Miss Sylvia Rosenthal, twenty-five years old, swam several hundred feet and rescued an eleven-year-old boy in White Bear lake.

The boy, a son of Dr. and Mrs. John Parker of New York, was knocked unconscious by a paddle when his canoe capsized. Miss Rosenthal leaped down the bank toward the water, slipped on a loose stone and fell, breaking her wrist.

Disregarding her own danger, she plunged into the water and finally brought the boy to the surface, struggling in his frantic grasp. After a brief fight she broke his hold and, holding the boy's head above water with her good arm, slowly propelled herself to shore with her feet.

Poetic Interpretation.
Poetry interprets in two ways: It interprets by expressing with magical felicity the physiognomy and movement of the outer world, and it interprets by expressing, with inspired conviction, the ideas and laws of the inward world of man's moral and spiritual nature. In other words, poetry is interpretative both by having natural magic in it, and by having moral profundity.—Matthew Arnold.

When you buy a KELLY CORD TIRE you get the long mileage for which Kellys have always been famous. You also get the greatest degree of protection against skidding that has ever been obtainable in any tire.

A good tire deserves a good tube. In fact, without a good tube inside it the best of tires won't yield the service its makers have built into it. Kelly tubes are a real economy. They are made to help tires deliver the mileage for which Kellys have always been noted.

Thorn Tree Cure for Ills.
The May blossom is the subject of some curious superstitions. Both the black and white thorn are said to be descended from the thorn of India, which, being sprung from lightning, is not only immune from danger in a thunderstorm, but possesses many magical gifts, a recent writer says, according to the Detroit News. The leaves from it are believed by many people to be a cure for all cases of inflammation, while a bough of blossom hung at the door is a safeguard against witches, but the blossom should not be taken into the house lest it bring disease with it. Many old countrymen will not cut down a hawthorne bush. They do not know why, though actually they are perpetuating an old belief that the bush is sacred, because from it, it is said, the crown of thorns for Christ was made.

THE BELL CALLS
By JANE GORDON
(Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)
MARGOT had walked the hot pavements of the city until she was worn and ill. Work seemed unavailable in her untrained state. She had been able to pick up typewriting, and made herself letter perfect, since the short time that she had been left alone in the world, through her father's death. But at every office where she presented herself, in answer to advertisements shorthand, and other necessary qualities appeared to be included in the requirements.

A lump arose painfully in her throat, as she walked, recalling the sweet comfort of the village home—now gone forever. Then, softly above the noise of traffic, came the methodical call of a bell. Margot saw the vine-covered gray stone church before her. Its door stood open invitingly. Near the door a placard announced "Vesper Service at Four."

Margot saw by the clock on the steeple, that it was now three-thirty. There, in that cool interior, the sun shaded by soft colored windows, she might find for half an hour—the rest she needed.
It was very still; slowly, through the perfumed shadows the girl made her way down the aisle. She lifted her hat to let the breeze from a high window touch her forehead. Then, with a sigh of relief, Margot sank, huddled like a child in a tall cushioned pew. Like a lullaby the bell far in the steeple continued its call. Paul Ormsby, the young rector, heard the call and rustled his papers nervously. Tonight's unfinished speech lay on the desk before him. Miss Mills had left in preparation for her wedding, and he had, in the stress of parish work, been unable to take time to procure another stenographer.

Paul Ormsby congratulated himself in Miss Mills' services. She was reliable, ladylike, agreeably different from other young women who had applied for the position. He knew that he must await a time of leisure—in securing another such.

The Reverend Paul drew his fine brows together impatiently as the bell continued to remind him that his time of duty was near; then, collecting the scattered notes of his evening's speech he endeavored to put himself in a becoming frame of mind for the afternoon service.

His old housekeeper came tapping at the study door. "Time for service, Mr. Paul," she reminded. She had been in his mother's home as trusted helper when the Reverend Paul was but a boy.

Out into the well-kept rectory garden he walked slowly—a green spot in the heart of a toiling city.
Close to the ivy-covered church a fountain sent its silver spray.

The rector's home was one of picturesque beauty; the young man often thought of it as a home of loneliness. The church was still devoid of worshippers. Paul dropped into a pew near the rostrum to think over his discourse. Then he smiled in sympathetic understanding. For a white-faced young woman sat huddled in the far corner of the pew—asleep. "The heat of the day," thought Paul; tears showed unmistakably on the pale cheeks—remorse, perhaps, for fancied sins.

The breeze from the high window lifted carelessly the girl's brown hair; the golden filtered light made of her a sort of little Saint Cecilia. The Reverend Paul was unaware of his admiration until the girl opened wide, surprised blue eyes.

His ministerial attire drew her attention. "I beg your pardon," said Margot. "I stepped in to rest, and fell asleep."

Others were coming softly down the aisle to service now.
"I had been looking for work in a strange city," she confessed to his interested gaze. Then it occurred to her that here might be her opportunity to find assistance.

"Do you know of anyone in need of a typist, sir?" Margot brought out the title of respect, in lack of the proper one.

Paul thought of those confusing notes at home on his desk; he thought of the evening's lecture. Did he know of anyone in need of a typist?
"Will you see me after service?" he asked, and hurried up to the desk. Margot was painstakingly eager with her offered references. There was one from the gray-haired pastor in her loved home town. The Reverend Paul read this, delightedly. He had heard the old minister's preaching.

Over the phone old Mr. Dinsmore spoke tenderly concerning the lonely girl in the strange city, who had been a happy girl among her own people.

It took a short time to fetch Margot's simple belongings from the shabby boarding house to the pretty sleeping room in the rectory, that was companionably close to that of the kind old housekeeper.

Margot found it agreeably easy to labor for the young rector's approval. And so—and so—one evening when the fountain was sending its silver spray against the ivy of the gray church wall a new and joyous Margot walked in the garden at the rector's side. Then, just as the bell called softly, Paul Ormsby asked her to be his wife. For a moment she listened in silence to the music, then Margot smiled upward:

"I obey always the voice of the bell," she said, and Paul was well content.

The Virgin of Guadalupe.
The Virgin of Guadalupe is the patron saint of Mexico, and more especially of the Mexican Indians. According to the legend, the Virgin Mary appeared to a converted Indian, named Juan Diego, in 1531, on the hill of Tepeyacac, near the City of Mexico, and, addressing him in his own language, told him that she wished a temple built to her on that very spot. At the foot of the hill is the church of Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe, completed in 1709. It contains an exquisite picture of the Virgin, said to have been miraculously imprinted by her on the surface of Diego's blanket. Guadalupe Hidalgo, with the sanctuary of the Virgin of Guadalupe, is situated about two miles north of the City of Mexico.

COOL ACT OF SEPOY SOLDIER

Leopard Springs at Native From Hut and Is Caught in Chest With Bayonet.

I was for a year with the maharaja
of Vizianagram, says W. A. Fraser, and one morning as I rode my gray
Turcoman from the cantonments toward his palace I saw an excited group of natives in front of a small mud hut.

It was about a leopard, the natives told me, that had jumped upon the thatched roof of the little building in the night, and was now within. It was a stable, with nothing but a woven bamboo thing as door; but strangely, the leopard had not tried to break
it down.

We could hear the angry snarl of the leopard and catch glimpses of his yellow hide as he prowled back and forth.

Then one of the maharaja's sepoys,
a tall, dark, black-whiskered chap,
came on the quickstep, his rifle, bayonet and all, swinging at the carry.
Within a minute he had arranged everything.

He planted himself firmly as if he were to receive a charge, his bayonet
advanced in front of the bamboo door,
and said to a brother soldier: "Look you here, Pertab! With one movement swing that thing of bamboo to your side and I will receive the bugh
on my bayonet."

The natives, hearing this order,
modestly retired. I turned the gray Turcoman and went back a little distance. Then the thing was done. It was so simple—much like clockwork.
The door was snatched to one side.
With an angry "Waugh!" the leopard sprang out, his fangs bared in a ferocious snarl, and the bayonet of
the sepoy's gun, held true and steady,
was sunk its full length in the leop-ard's chest.

The sepoy was brought to his knees
by the weight of the thrusting body,
but he never wavered.—Saturday Evening Post.

CAUSED PANIC IN FRANCE

John Law's Mississippi Bubble Almost Bankrupted Nation—Died in Poverty.

John Law, who inflated the famous Mississippi Bubble, started on his career of crime by being sentenced to death for a murder committed during a duel fought in England. He escaped to Holland, where he drifted into employment of the Bank of Amsterdam
a connection from which he collected sufficient capital to finance a campaign of gambling which netted him
the enormous sum of £100,000.

Law suggested to the Duke of Orleans, regent for the young King
Louis XV, the plan for the formation of a state bank with power to issue notes and accept deposits. It was from the success of this that there arose the idea for the Mississippi company, an organization designed to exploit the entire territory of Louisiana.
Shares in the company, originally purchased for $500, rose to $18,000. But,
before many months had passed, people began to unload and soon the movement became a panic. With financial ruin staring France in the face, Law was forced to resign and to retire to Brussels.

Ten years after the bursting of the most gigantic financial bubble in the history of the world, Law died in comparative poverty in Venice.—Detroit News.

Bonaparte Still Fascinates.

An electrical engineer of Charlottesville, Va., who recently died, left to Princeton university a collection of 3,000 volumes having to do with the French revolution and Napoleon.
There is an era in nearly every man's life when he reads this chapter in world history intensively. The fascination of Bonaparte is persistent.
The Yale senior class recently rated
him at or near the head of their favorite characters. It is presumably the dramatic quality in the man; just as people troop to the playhouse, so they divert themselves in reading of a great actor. The emotion cannot be called admiration—men supremely admire
Washington and Lincoln, but none ever called them "actors."

Tried to Convert Egypt.

The story of Akhnaton, who was the sovereign of a mighty realm, is told in H. G. Wells' "Outline of History."
From Ethiopia to the Mediterranean,
from the Nile to the Euphrates, Akh-naton was worshiped as a god. But he was human.

He loved his beautiful wife passionately. He had himself sculptured with her seated upon his knee—kissing her in his chariot. He tried to turn Egypt from the service of many gods to the worship of one.

For eighteen years he made headway against all the priesthood of his empire, but the hold of the old religion was too strong for him, and at his death his son-in-law, Tut-Ankh-Amen, fell again beneath their sway.—
Detroit News.

Another Fallacy.

It has been said that lightning never strikes twice in the same spot. The remark is about the most foolish and unscientific that could be made, for the electric discharge between the earth
and the clouds must find a conductor,
and where a good conductor is present,
there, of course, the discharge is most frequent. Iron or ironstone forms the best conductor, and the writer has known lightning to strike four times during one storm in a field where the subsoil was ironstone, while not a tree
was touched on the next property,
which happened to be stiff clay.

TRIP TO MOON BY ATOM FORCE

Mars and Venus Might Also Be Visited Through Discharge of Radio-Activity.

Shanghai.—One conceivable means
by which the moon, as well as Mars and Vennes, might be visited, is through the discharge on a large scale of radio-activity, and through the solution of the problem of the disintegration of matter into helium or hydrogen atoms. This is the belief of Dr.
Herbert Chatley.

May Be Life on the Moon.

In a lecture before the Quest society here, recently, Doctor Chatley said that the presence of life on the moon would be a matter of surpassing importance, but as yet there is no
very good evidence in its favor, and it seems almost inconceivable. There can be little or no water there, since no clouds are visible. There is also little or no air. Add to these facts the conditions that the days are 27
times as long as ours and that the temperature at lunar midday is greater than that of boiling water and at lunar midnight lower than that of the terrestrial poles and it will be understood that the circumstances are by no means propitious for life as we know it, he explains.

Can there then be life in some other form? Chemists are inclined to think that the very complex combinations which form the basis of our substance are unique, so that while it is conceivable that latent life may exist in a frozen state, active life is only possible between the freezing and boiling points of water.

Having discussed the question whether the moon was once part of the earth, as well as the influence of the moon upon the earth, Doctor
Chatley continued:

Jules Verne Had Idea.

"Speculative persons, mostly ro-mancers, have invented various methods by which they conceive the moon might be reached. Balloons or airplanes are out of the question since the earth's atmosphere thins out to practically nothing about 100 miles up.
Without that there is nothing to support them.

"Jules Verne imagined an enormous gun, with a shell as the lunar express (return passage not guaranteed). By the use of a very long gun and a charge more than 25 times as heavy as the shell, the necessary velocity (nearly ten miles per second) might perhaps be attained, but the acceleration would have the unfortunate effect of squashing the passengers to pulp just after they started which might impair their enjoyment of the trip.

Wells Pictured Lunar Car.

"H. G. Wells imagined a material called "cavorite" which was impervious to gravitation so that if it were placed under anything it would fly off under the influence of the attracting bodies on the upper side. His lunar car was a spherical box which had removable windows of cavorite
so that attraction by any desired direction could be used.

"Unfortunately this idea, quite apart
from the unfortunate fact that no such substance is known, is mechanically irreconcilable with a mechanical principle which may be popularly termed 'the impossibility of perpetual motion.' If cavorite shutters were opened and shut at intervals of time
the car would go up and down perpetually without any work being done.
Incidentally this indicates a very remarkable fact, that gravitation is inextricably associated with a continuous outpouring of energy.

Goddard Would Use Rocket.

"G. W. Griffith's provided his honeymooners in space with an anti-gravitational force. This has actually been hypothesized by some physicists, but there is no evidence of its existence.

"An American named Goddard has devised a large rocket which he thought would do the trick, but calculation shows that the most energetic explosives will not suffice to carry the rocket very far, unless the charge enormously exceeds the weight of the vehicle, and in any case the kick back velocity of the explosive gases is too small.

"The only conceivable means is by the discharge of radio-activity on a large scale and the solution of the problem of the disintegration of matter into helium or hydrogen atoms, which would actually provide a means of visiting not only the moon but also Mars and Venus.

"This question is bound up with that of the origin of the moon and there are various hypotheses. The meteorite theory regards them as the relics of a terrific bombardment. Others again hold that these enormous rings are due to the bursting of prodigious gas bubbles, while a minority hold to the old idea of volcanic action."

Deer Killed by a Train.

Sunbury, Pa.—A full-grown buck
deer was killed by a passenger train near here. The animal jumped in front of the locomotive, the crew said,
apparently trying to get to the Susquehanna river nearby. The animal was dressed and sent to the Mary
M. Packer hospital, Sunbury.

Find Manganese Ore in Africa.

about 20 feet wide and four miles long, has been found at Hekpoort, near the West Rand, in South Africa.

SOCIALISTS SIDETRACKED

Chancellor Stresemann Forming
New German Cabinet.

SEEKS FAR REACHING POWERS

Would Have Small Cabinet Clothed With Almost Dictatorial Authority. Socialists' Attitude Virtually Assures Passage by the Reichstag of Dictatorship Law—Provisional List of Cabinet Members.

Berlin, Oct. 5.—The Socialists will be thrown overboard in the new German cabinet.

It also appears most likely that Dr. Stresemann will try to return at the head of a small cabinet clothed with almost dictatorial power, and that the reichstag will be sent about its business.

The provisional list of the new cabinet as it stands at this time is: Chancellor and foreign minister, Dr. Stresemann; defense and interior, Dr. Hugo Gessler; labor, Herr Brauns; finance and economics, Dr. Hans Luther; food administrator, Von Oppen; posts and railways, Herr Heinrichs. Von Oppen is chairman of the union of agriculturists and stands near to the German Nationalists. Heinrichs is general director of the Deutsche Werke and a noted organizer.

As soon as his list is complete Stresemann plans to submit it to the reichstag, without consulting any of the parties, and request the passage of a law conferring far-reaching powers on the new cabinet. Such a law would be equivalent to amending the constitution and hence would require a two-thirds vote.

The Socialists and Communists together could block such a vote, but Stresemann believes he has secured the virtual assurance of 54 Socialists, who refused to vote against him Wednesday, that they will refrain from voting. This would assure the passage of the dictatorship law, which he will ask.

Whatever the outcome, one thing is certain: The political tide nearly everywhere in Germany is setting strongly to the right. This is due in part to the growing feeling that German parliamentarism has failed, and in part to the uncompromising adherence by the Socialists to their dogmas. The attitude of the Socialists is largely dictated by the realization that a surrender of their principles would cause many of their numbers to flee to the Communists.

In view of the fact that only 115 of the total of 173 Socialists in the reichstag voted Wednesday and the majority against the cabinet was only seven, efforts were made toward a reconstitution of the former coalition. The Socialists balked entirely. The People's party also objected, since the strong statement in their ranks is for participation in the government by the German Nationalists.

Bavaria's uncompromising declaration of war on Marxism has plainly strengthened the war on socialism everywhere. It is learned that there is increasing sentiment in Wurttemberg for a new state cabinet, with Nationals and without Socialists, and possibly also without Democrats.

CRABBE RENEWS DEMAND

Asks For Removal of Assistant State Welfare Director.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Attorney General Crabbe renewed his demand on Governor Donahay for an investigation of the charges filed against Assistant State Welfare Director John McNamara. Charges against McNamara were filed by Crabbe with the governor Aug. 30. No action has been taken since then by the governor.

Crabbe in his second letter says: "Conditions at the Girls' Industrial school have become so deplorable that I am urged by many to again call your attention to this matter, with the hope that you will realize how serious the situation is and do something for the unfortunate girls of this institution."

McNamara, as assistant welfare director, has had direct charge of the school since Mrs. Mae E. Stannard, former matron, was removed from office, and pending appointment of a new matron.

Crabbe charged that since McNamara took over management of the institution, "cruel methods of punishment have again been resorted to" and that because of "horrible conditions obtaining" there have been 204 escapes from the institution.

Republican National Committeeman to Hold Regional Conference.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Republican national committee officials began a pilgrimage to Denver, where on Oct. 11 and 12 the series of regional conferences with state leaders, preliminary to the 1924 presidential campaign, will be resumed. These conferences were inaugurated early in the summer, but were broken off after President Harding's death. Prior to that time meetings had been held in Boston, Cincinnati and Chicago. After the Denver conference similar sessions will be held at Minneapolis, Seattle, San Francisco and Richmond, Va. Chairman John T. Adams led the vanguard for the Denver convocation. The Denver meeting will mark the first definite step in an aggressive campaign which has been determined upon by the Republican managers to swing the west in 1924. The Minneapolis, Seattle and San Francisco conferences will be important for the same reason.

To Build Big Theater.
Youngstown, O., Oct. 5.—The B. F. Keith interests will erect a theater and building here estimated to cost approximately $1,450,000, it was announced. The building will extend on Wick avenue between Central square and Commerce street, and according to present plans will have a seating capacity of 2,300.

CARRY THE FIGHT TO GOVERNOR

Friends Demand an Arrest in Case of Mrs. Gertie Webb.

SMITH TO TAKE UP MATTER

Claim Made That Mrs. Webb, After She Had Been Told She Was Dying, Made a Statement That She Had Been Poisoned and Named the Person Who Had Given Her the Poison. Expert's Report Awaited.

New York, Oct. 5.—The fight for an arrest in the death of Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb, who is said to have been poisoned, has been carried to Albany by friends of the dead woman, who will ask Governor Smith to intervene in the investigation.

The friends of Mrs. Webb base their action on the fact that they claim Mrs. Webb, after she had been told she was dying, had made a statement that she had been poisoned and named the person who had given her the poison.

It is said that when Dr. William J. Meyer told Mrs. Webb she was dying she called to her the woman nurse, Mrs. Robert F. Johnstone, a friend since girlhood, and Dr. Meyer and in their presence made the statement she had been poisoned. It is held by legal advisers of the friends of the dead woman that this constituted a binding dying declaration within the intent of the law and that an arrest should follow. If the district attorney of Westchester county does not order an arrest, Governor Smith will be asked to act, as he did in the Ward case, they said.

The governor said he thought it was going to be a too common practice, the asking of the state to intervene in cases where the district attorney is empowered to act, but that he would take up the matter with Mrs. Webb's relatives and friends.

The complete report of Dr. Alexander Gettler, who examined the viscera of Mrs. Webb, and discovered traces of poison, will be given to the Westchester county grand jury probably Monday, when it will be made public. His examination so far has revealed poison, but not enough to have caused death.

It was announced also that Dr. Meyer, Mrs. Johnstone, Judge and Mrs. John F. McIntyre, George Taylor, A. B. Edgar, Francis Irwin, Dr. Ernest F. Krug and Dr. Davenport West, all of New York, will be called as witnesses before the grand jury. "I want every possible witness to give every possible fact about this peculiar case to the grand jury," District Attorney Rowland said.

GUARD MAY EMPLOY TANKS IN ATTACK

Convict Murderers Still at Bay
in Kentucky Prison.

Eddyville, Ky., Oct. 5.—Driven to desperate measures by the stubborn resistance offered by the three rebel convict murderers, Monte Walters, Lawrence Griffith and Henry Ferland, who have been besieged in the dining hall of the prison here since they attempted to shoot their way to freedom, a sortie that has cost the lives of three guards and the injury of two others, prison officials and national guard officers are determined to capture the convicts either dead or alive, even if it means tearing down the building stone by stone.

Besieged from all sides by Kentucky national guardsmen, prison guards and volunteers from the surrounding country, the convicts were at bay today in the brick ovens of the Kentucky penitentiary dining room. They have but one chance in a million to make their way over the walls, but should they do so they could traverse many miles in any direction without leaving the cover of forests and thickets.

It was rumored here that a request might be made for army tanks to be sent to the scene. If the tanks are used these moving forts could be pushed to the door of the dining hall and a devastating grenade fire directed from their fighting tops. A barrage was directed against the dining room. A machine gun was also brought into play upon the building.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Taft Explains Tax Act.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Taft taxation bill, which will be voted on in a referendum at the November election, was explained and defended by its author, Representative Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, at a meeting of the Roosevelt Republican club here. Purposes of the Taft bill, its author said, are: Restriction of the high cost of government by limiting expenditures, intelligent restriction of expenditures through budget control, a pay-as-you-go plan with respect to incurring public debts, a wider home rule as to current expenses.

Beetham Undecided.

Cadiz, O., Oct. 5.—Rupert R. Beetham, former speaker of the Ohio house of representatives, is undecided whether he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next year. This was indicated in a statement given out here in which he commented on the possibilities for the 1924 race. He was a candidate for the Republican nomination in 1922.

Impersonated Dry Officer.

Cleveland, Oct. 4.—Three men, displaying badges and representing themselves to be prohibition agents, entered the soft drink establishment of John Jarkiewicz here, and five minutes after searching it and his home upstairs disappeared with $4,800, his life's savings. Jarkiewicz had drawn the money from the bank to purchase the property he is occupying.

Safety Director Accused.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—A delegation of Canton citizens bearing complaints against Safety Director Edward E. Curtis of Canton, against whom charges of failure to enforce the prohibition laws had been filed, appeared before Governor Donahay. The latter reserved his decision with reference to calling a formal hearing on the charges.

Forged Liquor Blanks Out.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Federal Prohibition Director J. E. Russell sent letters to all druggists in Ohio warning them against counterfeit prescription blanks, pointing out in what respects they are different from the genuine. The signatures of the physicians on the prescription blanks are forged and the druggists are urged to scrutinize the signatures carefully.

Referee Reverses Decision.

Columbus, Ga., Oct. 5.—Claiming that he had been intimidated by the promoters and was forced to change his original decision of a draw to one in favor of Young Stribling of Georgia, Harry Ertle, referee of the Stribling-Mike McGigue bout here, said that his original verdict of a draw should stand. Under the latest statement of Ertle, who refereed the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, McGigue remains light heavyweight champion of the world, the title won when he defeated Battling Siki in Dublin. When Ertle made his first decision, a draw, the crowd stormed around the ring and, according to Ertle, threatened violence if he did not change the verdict.

Shooting Follows Quarrel.

Columbus, Oct. 5.—Following a quarrel, Mrs. Austin, 25, colored, was shot and killed by her husband, Will Austin, 27. Mrs. Austin died an hour after the shooting, being shot through her body.

BOOM WALTON FOR SENATOR

Supporters to Pit Him Against
Senator Owen.

PRELIMINARY STEPS TAKEN

Bitterest Factional Spirit Ever Known Now Prevailing in Oklahoma—Grand Jury to Probe Governor's Appointment of "Secret Service Men"—Other Developments in the Oklahoma Muddle.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 5.—What promises to be the most colorful political battle ever staged in the southwest will be put on in Oklahoma next year and very likely with Governor John Calloway Walton, if he is alive at that time, making the race for United States senator.

The boom for Walton to succeed Senator Owen already is on, with pledges of support from all sections of the state.

The preliminary steps in the senatorial campaign are being taken with the bitterest factional spirit prevailing ever known here. Households are divided, lifelong friendships have been shattered, and men of complacent mien all their lives are now carrying six shooters. Many ministers have become militant vicars of the Nazarene, with the "flaming sword" as their inspiration. Religious prejudice has divided congregations all over the state.

In this surcharged atmosphere, with hatreds comparable to the hates of the civilian populations of France and Germany during the war, the Walton people have accepted the challenge and will go ahead immediately with their plans for capturing the senatorial nomination. There probably will be at least four Democratic candidates for the nomination in the primary, with the main battle centering around Walton and Senator Owen who will seek a re-nomination, according to his friends.

Republican leaders, meantime, see a chance to cop another Republican senator from this state and possibly the electoral vote, with the Democratic forces so badly shattered. The factional strife, however, caused by the "invisible empire" is not confined to the Democrats. It also is smashing the hegemony of the G. O. P. ranks in all parts of the commonwealth.

A petition asking grand jury investigation of Governor Walton's appointment of "secret service men" was granted by Judge T. W. Clark in district court. The petition had been secured by Campbell Russell. A grand jury was called for October 15, and names of grand jury men were drawn.

By mutual agreement a suit brought by sixty-eight legislators to restrain Adjutant General Baird H. Markham, commander of the Oklahoma City military forces, from attempting to prevent a called session of the house of representatives was continued in Judge James I. Phelps' court, subject to 48-hour call from either side.

ENGLISH LEADER HEARD

Says High Wages Means Prosperity For the Nation.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 5.—High wages mean a high standard of living for the worker in every line of endeavor, and prosperity for the nation. This statement was made here in a speech delivered to the convention of the American Federation of Labor by Frank Hodges, secretary of the coal miners' federation of Great Britain and secretary of the international federation of coal miners of the world, of which the United Mine Workers of America is an integral part. Mr. Hodges said that in Great Britain the standard of living was much lower than in the United States, and the reason, he said, was because the labor movement in this country has concentrated on keeping wages at the maximum. This policy, he said, has largely eliminated unemployment. It will be followed in the future by the labor movement in his country, he indicated.

HARVEY AND CHILD QUIT

Resignations of Ambassadors to Great Britain and Italy Accepted.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The resignations of Col. George Harvey, ambassador to Great Britain and Richard Washburn Child, ambassador to Italy, have been tendered to President Coolidge and will become effective about January 1, 1924.

Colonel Harvey will remain at his London post for a month or six weeks longer, according to present plans, and return to the United States on leave of absence. Ambassador Child is scheduled to leave Rome this week. He also will be given leave of absence until his resignation takes effect.

Both resignations originally were offered to President Harding, just before his Alaskan trip. President Harding very reluctantly agreed to accept them, and President Coolidge is ratifying the pledge given by his predecessor. The reason given in each instance was that of "pressing personal business."

Among those prominently mentioned for the London post are Charles B. Warren, William M. Collier, Ambassador to Chile, Frank W. Stearns, Henry P. Fletcher and John Hays Hammond.

Pinned Under Machine.

Warren, O., Oct. 5.—George Swan of Cleveland was killed instantly and two companions seriously injured in an automobile accident at Southington, near here. The accident happened on a curve. The car overturned and landed in a ditch. Swan was pinned under the machine and was dead when taken out.

ARMY MAKES CLEAN SWEEP

Wins First, Second and Third Place in Thrilling Aerial Race.

St. Louis, Oct. 5.—The army swept the field in the most thrilling aerial spectacle yet staged in this country by taking first, second and third places in the Liberty engine builders' trophy race, for military planes only, with a marine plane finishing fourth.

The average speed of the winner, Lieutenant C. McMullen, piloting a Fokker, was 139.03 miles an hour. Lieutenant H. K. Ramey, in a De Havilland standard, second, averaged 137.74. Lieutenant L. H. Smith, in Co-5, was third, with 135.35 miles an hour. This time broke the record established last year when Lieutenant T. J. Koenig piloted a plane at 128.8 miles an hour.

Walter E. Lees, averaging a fraction less than 90 miles an hour, won the flying club race. Captain Burt E. Skeel, army pilot, averaging 143 miles an hour, won the Mitchell trophy.

Dykeman Lands.

Elyria, O., Oct. 5.—Henry A. Dykeman of this city has been selected to be chief of the prohibition enforcement division comprising the states of Ohio, Indiana and southern Michigan, to succeed E. L. Porterfield, recently made assistant to Prohibition Commissioner Roy Haynes.

Washable Paper.

A Stride of Twenty-Five Feet.
The average ostrich can outrun the best Arab horse, if the bird will continue on a straight-away course. The fact that wild ostriches like to run in circles invariably leads to capture, as a well-trained Arabian horse will follow the shortest course, knowing that ultimately the 'feet' ostrich will turn in his direction. In full flight the adult ostrich often shows a stride of 20 to 25 feet, which affords one explanation of its remarkable speed.—Nature Magazine.

SCIENTIST HAS NARROW ESCAPES

Chinese Bandits Endanger Life of Washington Plant Specialist.

ENTIRE TOWN IS WIPED OUT

Dangerous adventures and narrow escapes from bandits are befalling Joseph F. Rock, Washington scientist, who entered Yunnan province, China, on a quiet search for plants, but now faces dangers from which he writes, "God knows where I will emerge."
Mr. Rock went to the remote Burma-Tibet frontiers of China as head of a National Geographic society expedition which hoped to bring back numerous plants for American introduction, study the mystery of how American native corn apparently was transplanted there before 1492, and to seek a blight-resisting chestnut tree. He is the man who found the chaulmoogra trees, oil from which is used to treat leprosy.

From Likiangfu, China, he writes, under date of June 11:

"I just returned from an exciting trip to the Lachimling salt mines.

"Money is dreadfully scarce, paper is useless as no one will take it, especially up here with all these tribes-people.

"I decided to risk it and make a dash for Lachimling, in the heart of the wildest mountain ranges imaginable, to get funds to carry on the work and to see me through to wherever God knows where I will emerge.

"I had four Chinese drafts on the Lachimling salt mines from the Tai Salt office.

Official Feared for His Life.

"At first the Likiang official refused to give me an escort and said he feared for my life and would not let me go. Finally I said I must have money and I would risk it. He gave me two opium-sodden, disreputable wretches of soldiers as escorts. They were simply a nuisance and an expense. They were, of course, only to go as far as the next magistrate which is at Chien Chican.

"There I got four soldiers as far as Lauping. Lauping is not on any map as it is in unsurveyed territory. At Lauping which is five days west from Likiang, I got five soldiers and thence we started out through the wildest country imaginable to Lachimling. Dense forests, deep ravines, high mountain passes, the loveliest and weirdest imaginable. I was not afraid going to Lachimling, but I feared the return trip with about $1,000 in silver in the trunks.

"I took seven of my Moso men along and five soldiers from Lauping, besides myself, so we were thirteen people in all. We reached Lachimling safely and had no trouble to get the money. I had to go at the end of the month to arrange it so that I would reach the mines on the first, which I did.

"It is especially at this time that the roads are watched by the brigands, as usually on such dates money is dispatched. I was told at Taiifu to arrange to be at the mines about the first of the month. It is exceedingly difficult to keep things secret. We had no sooner arrived in Lachimling than everybody knew why we came. I did not stay longer than I had to to prevent the news traveling faster than we did, so I left the next morning with an additional escort from Lachimling. Thanks to the gods I reached Likiang without mishap.

"I put four scoundrels into the jail in Lauping where they got a beating, as they tried to foul me, but I got ahead of them and so here I am safe with the cash with which to carry on.

Entire Town Wiped Out.
"On my trip up the Yangtze and the Yundodye river toward Chungtien, I met the Grand Lama on the road who informed me that not a house has been left standing in Chungtien. The whole place has been burned and the Chinese official flew to Likiang where he is at present. Two thousand Tibetan bandits are at Hsiao Chungtien, five days north of Likiang. What will happen no one knows.

"I had a letter from the customs commissioner. He tells of the Tengyueh magistrate having been captured by brigands, and a ransom is asked of $20,000. It is certainly a problem how to get out of this country without losing one's life or all his belongings. However, our collecting goes on apace as if it were the most peaceful place in the world."

"ALPINE LIGHT" AS A CURE

Reproduction of Sun's Rays Used in Tuberculosis.

The use of the "Alpine light" in the treatment of tuberculosis is being tried in the X-ray department of Franklin Square hospital in Baltimore. In a number of cases, according to Dr. S. C. Bowers, director of the department, the patients have shown remarkable improvement.

The "Alpine light" makes it possible to reproduce, scientifically, the sun bath which have been found so beneficial at tuberculosis sanatoria in the Alps. One man who has been accustomed to go to the mountains every spring, Dr. Bowers said, has gained twenty-five pounds through the "Alpine light" treatment in two months. Tuberculosis of the bones or any other part of the system, as well as of the lungs, the doctor explained, may be treated in this way.

Gas From Wood Waste.
Utilizing wood waste for generating gas is claimed by a Swedish sawmill operator to save 75 per cent of the fuel used when the chips and sawdust are burned directly under the boiler. Added to this economy is a large production of valuable by-products, including acids, wood alcohol, and tar.

An Artist's Problem.

Of course, an artist's whole problem must be, as Carlyle wrote to me, the expressing with articulate clearness, the thought in him—I am almost inclined to say that clear expression should be his only work and care, for he is born, ordained, such as he is—and not born learned in putting what was born in him into words—whatever can be clearly spoken out to be. But "bricks and mortar" is very easily said, and some of the thoughts in "Sordello" not so readily. . . . I sin forty times in a day by light words and untrue to the thought.—Robert Browning.

Seed Cheapest Way to Increase Corn Yields

Best Place to Make Selection Is From Farm Yields.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Corn yields can be increased more surely and cheaply by the use of good seed than in any other way, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Unless a community has an experienced and honest corn breeder, the best place for the farmer to get seed corn is from the fields on his farm or in his neighborhood which were planted with a variety that has proved successful in the locality. The time for selecting seed corn in the field is almost here and preparations for handling the seed should soon be under way.

In selecting corn for seed, the ears should be taken from stalks which yield best in competition with others. Picking the seed corn direct from the field will give the farmer a chance to do this, and also to get ears that are free from disease and hang at a height convenient for husking. Drooping ears which shed rain readily usually will give the best seed, while in the South it is necessary to choose ears that are well protected from insects by a long, tight husk covering.

The same day the seed is gathered it should be hung in a dry, airy place. One of the best ways to cure seed corn is to hang it from the rafters of a barn or open shed, care being taken to see that it is thoroughly dry before there is danger of freezing. After it is well cured, store the corn in a dry place where it will not be damaged by mice, rats, birds and insects. The corn that produces the best crop is cheapest in the long run and care in selecting and handling seed corn will be more than repaid by increased yields.

Opinions differ as to the best time to cut corn for silage. While the largest yield of food nutrients will be obtained if the corn is permitted to mature fairly well, it should not be too ripe for the reason that it will not pack so well in the silo and is more likely to mold. It may also be somewhat indigestible if fully matured.

Andrew Boss, vice director of the Minnesota experiment station at University farm, says that as a safe working plan one should begin cutting corn for silage when three or four of the lower leaves dry up and drop off. Then the corn will usually be in the milk or hard dough stage and some of the early ears will be glazed or dented. Silage made under these conditions will be at its best for dairy cows.

But for beef cattle, says Professor Boss, the corn should be left in the fields until fully dented unless perchance a severe drouth or hot spell has dried out the corn prematurely. Beef cattle feeders prefer better developed ears and greater maturity of the plant than do those who put up ensilage for dairy cows.

Best Variety of Fowls for Beginner to Raise

Perhaps the most frequent question asked of the poultryman is this: "What is the best variety of poultry to raise?" It generally depends upon the chicken man to whom you address your question as to what the reply will be. If he raises White Plymouth Rocks himself, he will quite naturally be inclined to tell you that Plymouth Rocks of the white variety are the best fowls to raise; if you happen to ask the question of a Barred Plymouth Rock fancier, then in all probability it will be Barred Rocks that you must raise to succeed, and should you ask the question of a Rhode Island Red enthusiast, why then there is absolutely nothing to it—Reds always were and always will be the best breed. And so it goes all along the line—White Wyandottes, White, Black and Buff Orpingtons, White and Brown Leghorns, Anconas, White and Black Minorcas, Golden and Silver Campines and even Blue Andalusians—yes, these and all the others mentioned have supporters somewhere who will tell you that your success is assured if you select the one best variety and each will name a different one.

Take Good Care of All Early Hatched Pullets

Take good care of the early hatched pullets. Sell most of the young cockerels, as soon as possible, but hold on to the pullets and keep them for winter laying. The hens older than two years had best be disposed of at once unless they possess some special merit for which you desire to carry them over another winter. As a general rule, it is well to keep the flock young and vigorous. Hens will lay just as well without males as with them, and it is an inexcusable mistake to carry over winter a lot of surplus roosters. Get rid of them at once.

Wheat Is Satisfactory Ration for Brood Sows

Wheat makes a fair feed for sows if fed with other feeds in the ration containing better balanced protein and the necessary minerals. Brood sows must not be allowed to become too fat and should not be allowed a ration consisting almost entirely of wheat. If carefully watched and given some supplement such as a legume or tankage the wheat will be very satisfactory.

Pinchot to Start Injunction Proceedings in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—Following a tour of Philadelphia's saloons, Governor Pinchot announced that he is more determined than ever to wipe out the 1,300 open bars of the city. He will use the "padlock" provision of the law if the saloons refuse to quit selling intoxicants. The governor said: "If saloonkeepers and owners of 1,300 properties where these public nuisances are maintained desire them abated by injunction, so that their properties are closed for a year for any business purpose, their desires shall be gratified. The saloons and the interests behind them can no longer defy the constitution and the federal and state statutes." It was learned that the governor's forces planned to start injunction proceedings in court next week.

SCAR TELLS WOMAN'S AGE

Size of Vaccination Mark, Bared by Sleeveless Gowns, Shows Period of Inoculation.

Twenty years ago when the popular wave of smallpox vaccination swept the land, and when every school girl bared her arm for the medical process that necessitated a permanent scar, it is probable that neither mothers nor doctors foresaw the coming of the present-day fashions in sleeveless gowns.

Those were the days of trailing skirts, bustles, long sleeves and high feminine collars, and when the doctor inquired of the solicitous mother as to where he should put the mark upon the little girl the mother felt quite safe in choosing a position so well concealed as the upper arm.

Few mothers of those days could believe that a scar upon the arm well up toward the shoulder would ever find its way into the light of public attention, but the passing of years, with the consequent changing of styles, has brought about circumstances that were unexpected, and the marks are at last out in the open, exposed to the gaze of whoever cares to look.

Observing persons assert they have little difficulty in telling the age of a young woman merely by noting the kind and size of vaccination scar. The doctors at one time thought it necessary to make marks the size of a half dollar, but with the passing of years they became smaller and smaller until now a scratch that is almost invisible is all the process requires. The girl whose vaccination mark corresponds to the size of a dime belongs to a different period from the girl with the nickel mark, the quarter mark or the half-dollar mark, and with the donning of the sleeveless gown she feels that her age is stamped indelibly upon her. The modern physician's system marks an advance in surgical science that will be appreciated by the debutante a decade or so hence.

BOYS OF 1,400 YEARS AGO

Field Museum at Chicago Has Beautiful Chinese Painting Which Shows Youngsters at Play.

In a room of Chinese art relics in the Field Museum of Natural History at Chicago hangs a curious, beautiful painting on silk, called "A Hundred Boys at Play." It is a panel, many yards long, which was made during the Sung period of Chinese history, about 1,400 years ago, by an artist named Su Hanchen.

There you may see a hundred Chinese boys busily occupied with indoor and outdoor pastimes. And from the expressions on their little painted faces, it seems that they are about as industriously happy at their play as boys of the present day. The interesting part is to see that the games they played in China so long ago were the same sort that boys play now.

Those boys even seemed to know a form of football, for you see boys scrambling for a kicked ball. Others are wrestling, shooting at targets, playing war and amusing themselves with fighting crickets. Still others are engaged in less active sports, such as playing chess, riding hobby horses, flying kites, dancing and playing the organ and lute.

On one bank sits a boy with a fishing pole. Across from him a Chinese friend has set up a store and is a merchant.

Disillusioned.

She had come to New York to study art. She was only sixteen, and when she heard that her roommate was to be a Spanish girl she was thrilled. She was really seeing life, to be in New York and to have a romantic, ardent Spaniard for a roommate. Perhaps she would even stab a lover or two.

The Woman saw the young girl the other day.

"And your roommate? Is she exciting?" the Woman asked.

"Exciting," sneered the girl, "anything but! She practices scales so diligently I feel as though I'll go mad, and she's so proper and modest that she even wears high-necked and long-sleeved nightgowns made of thick cotton."—New York Sun and Globe.

Powdered "Pharaoh" Wanted.

Powdered "Pharaoh" was one of the sovereign remedies of medieval times. It cured wounds. It was made into salves and balsams. It was swallowed as a physic. It formed the basis of all the black arts.

Othello's handkerchief owed its magic power to dyes made from mummified maidens' hearts. The witches in "Macbeth" gave potency to their charmed brew by adding powdered mummy. To such an extent was tomb-robbing carried on even in ancient times that mummies of the great kings were taken from their own tombs and hidden away in secret places, while proxies were left in their stead.—Detroit News.

The Honest Neighbor.

At dusk a suburbanite headed sheepishly across to the next abode, called out the occupant and said: "Mr. Wombat, I want to return your lawn mower."

Wombat declined to take it, whereupon the other man was much perturbed.

"I know I have kept it a long time," he murmured. "Pardon me and let me return it."

To which Wombat responded: "I must be honest with you. I had only one lawn mower and neighbors have already returned six."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

W. G. HARDING ENROLLS.

The long line of students before the registrar's office at Ohio State university was held up for several minutes while officials rubbed their eyes and stared at an enrollment card bearing the name, "Warren G. Harding."

The card had been presented by a nephew and namesake of the late editor-president, who, apparently desiring to follow in the footsteps of his distinguished uncle, entered the college of commerce and journalism.

Warren is a son of Dr. George T. Harding Jr., of Worthington, Ohio. He has been pledged by the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Henry Hudson's Fate.

The first navigators who sailed on voyages of discovery to the new world had no easy task to control the adventurous crews who manned their vessels. The troubles that Columbus had to face are well known. Magellan was called upon to put down mutiny among the crew and rebellion among his officers. But to Henry Hudson, discoverer of the river that bears his name, fell the sad fate of being overpowered by mutineers and sent to certain doom at sea. The year following his discovery of Hudson river bay and Hudson strait, his crew rebelled, and seizing Hudson and eight others, bound them and set them adrift in a small boat on Hudson bay, June 23, 1611. They were never heard from again.

Lightning's Pranks.

Lightning plays pranks which are not so easily explained. Some years ago a Russian steamer crossing the Black sea was struck by lightning three separate times within seven minutes. Though set on fire, her crew managed to put out the flames and get her back to port. A wheat ship on Lake Huron was struck twice within three minutes, each time in the same spot. The second flash set her on fire and she sank.

Good Name Beyond Price.

Garments that have once one rent in them are subject to be torn on every nail, and glasses that are once cracked are soon broken; such is man's good name once tainted with just reproach.—Bishop Hall.

NOW IS TIME TO HELP.

Now that the Hinde Paper Box company has selected the site for their new Container Plant, there is no longer any reason for our people withholding their support from the project. Identifying Her.

Donald had a new pair of tan shoes of which he was very proud. He came to the house one day after playing with two little girls, one of whom had "hair," and said, "Mother, the girl with the tan hair is very cross."

Dramatic Power.
The first thing that strikes any one who has tried to read Jane Austen's novels aloud is the dramatic power displayed in the conversations. No novelist ever made his or her characters express themselves so simply or forcibly in their parts as she does. It would seem that we have lost in her one of our greatest playwrights. The unfolding of character in dialogue has not been better done by any of our dramatists, and has certainly not been approached by any other novelist. No novels make so immediate an appeal when declaimed as hers do. Even youthful audiences who are popularly supposed to be incapable of appreciating the subtlety of her wit are quickly entranced.—S. P. B. Mals.

Earth's Age Is "Set."
After long investigation, scientists have announced that the earth has been in about its present state for two or three billion years. Geological measurements previously made were all lost in a maze of time before they had traced the history of the planet beyond 100,000,000 years. The present discovery rests on the rate by which radioactive substances change form. These materials are not permanent, but in time turn into lead.—Popular Mechanics.

BALL GAME

Bad Blood at Harrisburg-Commercial Point High School Contest.
Residents of Harrisburg and Commercial Point are all worked up over a rumup over a baseball game. It seems that the trouble started when one John Kell Sr. aged 74 of Harrisburg, a bus driver, who had accompanied his son, John Kell Jr., to a game played at Commercial Point, Friday, September 28, between Harrisburg and Scioto township centralized schools.

There seems to have been a little rivalry and bad feeling between the opposing teams and in the sixth inning Young Kell Jr., was hit by a pitched ball and this was the start of the trouble. The game was broken up and the Harrisburg players started to return home. In their going, it is said John Kell Sr., threw a rock which hit one of the Commercial high school students. He was placed under arrest after a chase of five miles and was taken before Justice A. A. Miller, where he answered to the charge of assault and battery. Mr. Kell plead not guilty and was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $300.

VISITS BOYHOOD HOME.
Mr. and Mrs. George Rowland, of Greenwich, Connecticut, are in the city, stopping at The Boggs. Mr. Rowland's boyhood days were spent in this city and this is his first visit here in 65 years. He is much interested in visiting the scenes where he spent many happy hours so long ago.

His father was Rev. James Rowland, pastor of the First Presbyterian church from 1844 until 1854. At the time of his death his remains were buried under the belfry and now repose under the tower of the new church.

Bible's Only French Word.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"I have a friend just back from England" said the Hotel Stenographer. "She tells me that over there that almost every day is a half holiday. Nobody works Monday or Saturday, for they are weekends and everybody stops two or three times a day for tea."

"Is that so?" asked the House Detective. "No wonder they couldn't ever get along with their Irish neighbors."

"Never mind, Kelly, pretty soon we will all be like that parable in the Bible, where everybody loafs and fishes. We got us a Labor day when nobody works and we got us a Saturday that in the summer has grown from a half holiday to a whole one."

"We got us a Mothers' day and a Memorial day and Independence day, and a lot of other days to motor and play golf so we can have respect for our mothers and our soldiers and our liberty."

"We got us a Christmas day when everybody buys things they can't afford and gives them to people who do not want them."

"We begin the new year on a New Year's day, which is a holiday just to show that we do propose to work ourselves to death that year."

"Now I see that some women have started a movement to get a mother-in-law day when everybody who has a mother-in-law will wear a pink rosebud and try to wear an expression which indicates that life is fleeting and death sure."

"Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, says that in a few years improved machinery will fix it so none of us will have to work over four hours a day. Maybe he is right about it, but, Kelly, I get to get out these letters some time this afternoon, and if you do not beat it away from here and stop talking to me I am not going to get done before 5 o'clock."

BAKE SALE.

FROSTY MORNING.

The thermometer hit the 30 degree mark Thursday night. It was the coldest so far this season and it began to grow colder shortly after noon when the thermometer registered 64. Nearly everything in the vegetation was covered with a white hoary frost. Bean vines were scorched badly and a thin sheet of ice formed on water in low places.

How Women Mail Letters.

Femininity has its own way of posting a simple, everyday letter, according to one keen observer. For instance, out of 30 women who were watched at a street letter box in the residential section of a large city, 21 withdrew the letter before quite letting go of it, to scan both sides of the envelope, to be certain the letter was securely sealed, properly addressed, stamped and to make sure nobody could look through the envelope to read the contents.

AMUSEMENTS

One of the most entertaining photo-plays presented at the Met theater this season is "Your Friend and Mine" a screen version of the stage hit by Willard Mack, with the author in the role he played on the stage. It has all the elements that go to make a film of genuine satisfaction. Story acting, settings and direction are all of the highest order, leaving nothing to be desired.

"Your Friend and Mine," tells of the plans of a celebrated author to show up the evil intentions of a bogus artist. The latter is in love with the wife of the author's friend and the husband is ignorant of the artist's true feeling toward his wife. The author reads to the wife, in the presence of the artist the manuscript of a play which he has written. It is concerned with a situation in which all are involved; and its dramatic climax is so impressive as to defeat the schemes of the artist.

Willard Mack in his usual self in the author's role. Enid Bennett does well as the neglected wife and Huntly Goddon is admirable as her husband. The artist is carefully played by J. Herbert Frank. Others of importance are Rosemary Theby, Otto Lederer and Aileen Ray.

The excellent direction of the photo-play is the work of Clarence G. Badger. The photoplay was produced by SL Pictures (Sawyer-Lubin) and released by Metro Pictures Corporation. It was adapted by Winifred Dunn from Mr. Mack's play. The photography is the work of Rudolph Bergquist.

TRAVELER FAILS TO FIND
BIGGEST THING IN LIFE.Globe Trotter Obtains 57 Pounds
of Names in 21 Years

Cleveland, O.—Josef F. Mikulec has wandered over 200,000 miles seeking "The Biggest Thing in Life."

And after twenty-one years of globe trotting and autograph collecting, he isn't sure but what he might have found the object of his search right at home in California.

"I have visited kings and queens, presidents, governors and notables in all lands. I have seen every country and every city; have traveled when and where I pleased—but I have missed the biggest thing in life," he says sadly.

"The biggest thing? Companionship—real companionship."

"I meet scores of people every day. But they aren't interested in me and I can't get the opportunity to become interested in them. They want to know of my travels, and I've got to tell it all over again."

"When the day is done, I haven't anyone I can sit down and talk with as one friend talks with another. And that is the biggest thing in life."

Every one knows Mikulec, President Harding once met him. So has Woodrow Wilson, the Prince of Wales, J. P. Morgan, the late Teddy Roosevelt and hundreds of others of equal note.

Twenty-one years ago—he's forty-five now—Joe left his home in Croatia, a province of Hungary. He's been walking ever since, through a score of nations and every state in the United States.

Now he wants a little farm somewhere in his adopted country. He sees a wheat field, or maybe rows of corn and tomatoes and plows and horses and chickens—and neighbors.

Joe's autograph book weighs 57 pounds now. Names that would amaze you are written in it. Just about every world character except John D. Rockefeller and the King of England.

He uses a little wagon to carry the book, it is so heavy. For many years, however, he carried it, but it wasn't that big then. He increases it as it fills.

Joe wants to see his book finally placed in a museum or library. He hopes someone will buy it for that purpose.

Price? He won't say, but he does add that what it brings will buy the farm and have plenty left over to tide him through the remainder of this life with friends.

Effects of Late Empress

Bring $10,000 at Auction

London.—Members of England's oldest and highest families stood with almost tearful eyes when the once priceless effects of the late Empress Eugenie of France were sold under the hammer at ridiculously small prices, but still beyond their impoverished purses. The goods sold were principally her late majesty's dresses, slippers, gowns, laces and furs.

Most of the stuff was bought by dealers, although some of the former empress' servants and followers were able to buy small articles.

The 100 lots brought about $10,000, which would hardly have paid for one of the court gowns worn at the royal festivities in the days of splendor.

A lot of rare Alencon lace brought $1,115, and a fur stole $525. A beautiful rug into which was woven the royal cipher with the arms of Spain and France, given to the empress on her wedding day by the carpetmakers of Seville, was bought by a Frenchman and will be presented to a French museum. It is supposed to have been on this rug that the Emperor Napoleon III and empress knelt when they received the blessing after their marriage.

Cat Braves Flames to

Return to Her Kittens

New York.—Loyalty to a litter of kittens, it is believed, caused a large maltese cat rescued by firemen from the Towers Warehouse, Inc., at West and Watt streets, to break away from her rescuers on the sidewalk and dart back into the burning building.

It was presumed the cat had the kittens hidden in a part of the warehouse untouched by fire or smoke, but firemen who went back into the building after her could not locate cat or kittens.

Girl Breaks Her Arm
Saving Drowning Boy

St. Paul, Minn.—With one arm broken at the wrist, Miss Sylvia Rosenthal, twenty-five years old, swam several hundred feet and rescued an eleven-year-old boy in White Bear lake.

The boy, a son of Dr. and Mrs. John Parker of New York, was knocked unconscious by a paddle when his canoe capsized. Miss Rosenthal leaped down the bank toward the water, slipped on a loose stone and fell, breaking her wrist.

Disregarding her own danger, she plunged into the water and finally brought the boy to the surface, struggling in his frantic grasp. After a brief fight she broke his hold and, holding the boy's head above water with her good arm, slowly propelled herself to shore with her feet.

Poetic Interpretation.

Poetry interprets in two ways: It interprets by expressing with magical felicity the physiognomy and movement of the outer world, and it interprets by expressing, with inspired conviction, the ideas and laws of the inward world of man's moral and spiritual nature. In other words, poetry is interpretative both by having natural magic in it, and by having moral profundity.—Matthew Arnold.

Thorn Tree Cure for Ills.
The May blossom is the subject of some curious superstitions. Both the black and white thorn are said to be descended from the thorn of India, which, being sprung from lightning, is not only immune from danger in a thunderstorm, but possesses many magical gifts, a recent writer says, according to the Detroit News. The leaves from it are believed by many people to be a cure for all cases of inflammation, while a bough of blossom hung at the door is a safeguard against witches, but the blossom should not be taken into the house lest it bring disease with it. Many old countrymen will not cut down a hawthorne bush. They do not know why, though actually they are perpetuating an old belief that the bush is sacred, because from it, it is said, the crown of thorns for Christ was made.

THE BELL CALLS
By JANE GORDON
(Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)
MARGOT had walked the hot pavements of the city until she was worn and ill. Work seemed unavailable in her untrained state. She had been able to pick up typewriting, and made herself letter perfect, since the short time that she had been left alone in the world, through her father's death. But at every office where she presented herself, in answer to advertisements shorthand, and other necessary qualities appeared to be included in the requirements.
A lump arose painfully in her throat, as she walked, recalling the sweet comfort of the village home—now gone forever. Then, softly above the noise of traffic, came the methodical call of a bell. Margot saw the vine-covered gray stone church before her. Its door stood open invitingly. Near the door a placard announced "Vesper Service at Four."
Margot saw by the clock on the steeple, that it was now three-thirty. There, in that cool interior, the sun shaded by soft colored windows, she might find for half an hour—the rest she needed.
It was very still; slowly, through the perfumed shadows the girl made her way down the aisle. She lifted her hat to let the breeze from a high window touch her forehead. Then, with a sigh of relief, Margot sank, huddled like a child in a tall cushioned pew. Like a lullaby the bell far in the steeple continued its call. Paul Ormsby, the young rector, heard the call and rustled his papers nervously. Tonight's unfinished speech lay on the desk before him. Miss Mills had left in preparation for her wedding, and he had, in the stress of parish work, been unable to take time to procure another stenographer.
Paul Ormsby congratulated himself in Miss Mills' services. She was reliable, ladylike, agreeably different from other young women who had applied for the position. He knew that he must await a time of leisure—in securing another such.
The Reverend Paul drew his fine brows together impatiently as the bell continued to remind him that his time of duty was near; then, collecting the scattered notes of his evening's speech he endeavored to put himself in a becoming frame of mind for the afternoon service.
His old housekeeper came tapping at the study door. "Time for service, Mr. Paul," she reminded. She had been in his mother's home as trusted helper when the Reverend Paul was but a boy.
Out into the well-kept rectory garden he walked slowly—a green spot in the heart of a toiling city.
Close to the ivy-covered church a fountain sent its silver spray.
The rector's home was one of picturesque beauty; the young man often thought of it as a home of loneliness. The church was still devoid of worshippers. Paul dropped into a pew near the rostrum to think over his discourse. Then he smiled in sympathetic understanding. For a white-faced young woman sat huddled in the far corner of the pew—asleep. "The heat of the day," thought Paul; tears showed unmistakably on the pale cheeks—remorse, perhaps, for fancied sins.
The breeze from the high window lifted caressingly the girl's brown hair; the golden filtered light made of her a sort of little Saint Cecilia. The Reverend Paul was unaware of his admiration until the girl opened wide, surprised blue eyes.
His ministerial attire drew her attention. "I beg your pardon," said Margot. "I stepped in to rest, and fell asleep."
Others were coming softly down the aisle to service now.
"I had been looking for work in a strange city," she confessed to his interested gaze. Then it occurred to her that here might be her opportunity to find assistance.
"Do you know of anyone in need of a typist, sir?" Margot brought out the title of respect, in lack of the proper one.
Paul thought of those confusing notes at home on his desk; he thought of the evening's lecture. Did he know of anyone in need of a typist?
"Will you see me after service?" he asked, and hurried up to the desk. Margot was painstakingly eager with her offered references. There was one from the gray-haired pastor in her loved home town. The Reverend Paul read this, delightedly. He had heard the old minister's preaching.
Over the phone old Mr. Dinsmore spoke tenderly concerning the lonely girl in the strange city, who had been a happy girl among her own people.
It took a short time to fetch Margot's simple belongings from the shabby boarding house to the pretty sleeping room in the rectory, that was companionably close to that of the kind old housekeeper.
Margot found it agreeably easy to labor for the young rector's approval. And so—and so—one evening when the fountain was sending its silver spray against the ivy of the gray church wall a new and joyous Margot walked in the garden at the rector's side. Then, just as the bell called softly, Paul Ormsby asked her to be his wife. For a moment she listened in silence to the music, then Margot smiled upward.
"I obey always the voice of the bell," she said, and Paul was well content.

The Virgin of Guadalupe.
The Virgin of Guadalupe is the patron saint of Mexico, and more especially of the Mexican Indians. According to the legend, the Virgin Mary appeared to a converted Indian, named Juan Diego, in 1531, on the hill of Tepeyacac, near the City of Mexico, and, addressing him in his own language, told him that she wished a temple built to her on that very spot. At the foot of the hill is the church of Nuestra Senora de Guadalupe, completed in 1709. It contains an exquisite picture of the Virgin, said to have been miraculously imprinted by her on the surface of Diego's blanket. Guadalupe Hidalgo, with the sanctuary of the Virgin of Guadalupe, is situated about two miles north of the City of Mexico.

COOL ACT OF SEPOY SOLDIER

Leopard Springs at Native From Hut and Is Caught in Chest With Bayonet.

I was for a year with the maharaja of Vizianagram, says W. A. Fraser, and one morning as I rode my gray Turcoman from the cantonments toward his palace I saw an excited group of natives in front of a small mud hut.

It was about a leopard, the natives told me, that had jumped upon the thatched roof of the little building in the night, and was now within. It was a stable, with nothing but a woven bamboo thing as door; but strangely, the leopard had not tried to break it down.

We could hear the angry snarl of the leopard and catch glimpses of his yellow hide as he prowled back and forth.

Then one of the maharaja's sepoys, a tall, dark, black-whiskered chap, came on the quickstep, his rifle, bayonet and all, swinging at the carry. Within a minute he had arranged everything.

He planted himself firmly as if he were to receive a charge, his bayonet advanced in front of the bamboo door, and said to a brother soldier: "Look you here, Pertab! With one movement swing that thing of bamboo to your side and I will receive the bakh on my bayonet."

The natives, hearing this order, modestly retired. I turned the gray Turcoman and went back a little distance. Then the thing was done. It was so simple—much like clockwork. The door was snatched to one side. With an angry "Waugh!" the leopard sprang out, his fangs bared in a ferocious snarl, and the bayonet of the sepoy's gun, held true and steady, was sunk its full length in the leopard's chest.

The sepoy was brought to his knees by the weight of the thrusting body, but he never wavered.—Saturday Evening Post.

CAUSED PANIC IN FRANCE

John Law's Mississippi Bubble Almost Bankrupted Nation—Died in Poverty.

John Law, who inflated the famous Mississippi Bubble, started on his career of crime by being sentenced to death for a murder committed during a duel fought in England. He escaped to Holland, where he drifted into employment of the Bank of Amsterdam a connection from which he collected sufficient capital to finance a campaign of gambling which netted him the enormous sum of £100,000.

Law suggested to the Duke of Orleans, regent for the young King Louis XV, the plan for the formation of a state bank with power to issue notes and accept deposits. It was from the success of this that there arose the idea for the Mississippi company, an organization designed to exploit the entire territory of Louisiana. Shares in the company, originally purchased for $500, rose to $18,000. But, before many months had passed, people began to unload and soon the movement became a panic. With financial ruin staring France in the face, Law was forced to resign and to retire to Brussels.

Ten years after the bursting of the most gigantic financial bubble in the history of the world, Law died in comparative poverty in Venice.—Detroit News.

Bonaparte Still Fascinates.

An electrical engineer of Charlottesville, Va., who recently died, left to Princeton university a collection of 3,000 volumes having to do with the French revolution and Napoleon. There is an era in nearly every man's life when he reads this chapter in world history intensively. The fascination of Bonaparte is persistent. The Yale senior class recently rated him at or near the head of their favorite characters. It is presumably the dramatic quality in the man; just as people troop to the playhouse, so they divert themselves in reading of a great actor. The emotion cannot be called admiration—men supremely admire Washington and Lincoln, but none ever called them "actors."

Tried to Convert Egypt.

The story of Akhnaton, who was the sovereign of a mighty realm, is told in H. G. Wells' "Outline of History." From Ethiopia to the Mediterranean, from the Nile to the Euphrates, Akhnaton was worshiped as a god. But he was human.

He loved his beautiful wife passionately. He had himself sculptured with her seated upon his knee—kissing her in his chariot. He tried to turn Egypt from the service of many gods to the worship of one.

For eighteen years he made headway against all the priesthood of his empire, but the hold of the old religion was too strong for him, and at his death his son-in-law, Tut-Ankh-Amen, fell again beneath their sway.—Detroit News.

Another Fallacy.

It has been said that lightning never strikes twice in the same spot. The remark is about the most foolish and unscientific that could be made, for the electric discharge between the earth and the clouds must find a conductor, and where a good conductor is present, there, of course, the discharge is most frequent. Iron or ironstone forms the best conductor, and the writer has known lightning to strike four times during one storm in a field where the subsoil was ironstone, while not a tree was touched on the next property, which happened to be stiff clay.

TRIP TO MOON BY ATOM FORCE

Mars and Venus Might Also Be Visited Through Discharge of Radio-Activity.

Shanghai.—One conceivable means by which the moon, as well as Mars and Venus, might be visited, is through the discharge on a large scale of radio-activity, and through the solution of the problem of the disintegration of matter into helium or hydrogen atoms. This is the belief of Dr. Herbert Chatley.

May Be Life on the Moon.

In a lecture before the quest society here, recently, Doctor Chatley said that the presence of life on the moon would be a matter of surpassing importance, but as yet there is no very good evidence in its favor, and it seems almost inconceivable. There can be little or no water there, since no clouds are visible. There is also little or no air. Add to these facts the conditions that the days are 27 times as long as ours and that the temperature at lunar midday is greater than that of boiling water and at lunar midnight lower than that of the terrestrial poles and it will be understood that the circumstances are by no means propitious for life as we know it, he explains.

Can there then be life in some other form? Chemists are inclined to think that the very complex combinations which form the basis of our substance are unique, so that while it is conceivable that latent life may exist in a frozen state, active life is only possible between the freezing and boiling points of water.

Having discussed the question whether the moon was once part of the earth, as well as the influence of the moon upon the earth, Doctor Chatley continued:

Jules Verne Had Idea.

"Speculative persons, mostly romancers, have invented various methods by which they conceive the moon might be reached. Balloons or airplanes are out of the question since the earth's atmosphere thins out to practically nothing about 100 miles up. Without that there is nothing to support them.

"Jules Verne imagined an enormous gun, with a shell as the lunar express (return passage not guaranteed). By the use of a very long gun and a charge more than 25 times as heavy as the shell, the necessary velocity (nearly ten miles per second) might perhaps be attained, but the acceleration would have the unfortunate effect of squashing the passengers to pulp just after they started which might impair their enjoyment of the trip.

"H. G. Wells imagined a material called 'cavorite' which was impervious to gravitation so that if it were placed under anything it would fly off under the influence of the attracting bodies on the upper side. His lunar car was a spherical box which had removable windows of cavorite so that attraction to any desired direction could be used.

"Unfortunately this idea, quite apart from the unfortunate fact that no such substance is known, is mechanically irreconcilable with a mechanical principle which may be popularly termed the impossibility of perpetual motion. If cavorite shutters were opened and shut at intervals of time the car would go up and down perpetually without any work being done. Incidentally this indicates a very remarkable fact, that gravitation is inextricably associated with a continuous outpouring of energy.

Goddard Would Use Rocket.

"G. W. Griffith's provided his honey-mooners in space with an anti-gravitational force. This has actually been hypothesized by some physicists, but there is no evidence of its existence.

"An American named Goddard has devised a large rocket which he thought would do the trick, but calculation shows that the most energetic explosives will not suffice to carry the rocket very far, unless the charge enormously exceeds the weight of the vehicle, and in any case the kick back velocity of the explosive gases is too small.

"The only conceivable means is by the discharge of radio-activity on a large scale and the solution of the problem of the disintegration of matter into helium or hydrogen atoms, which would actually provide a means of visiting not only the moon but also Mars and Venus.

"This question is bound up with that of the origin of the moon and there are various hypotheses. The meteorite theory regards them as the relics of a terrific bombardment. Others again hold that these enormous rings are due to the bursting of prodigious gas bubbles, while a minority hold to the old idea of volcanic action."

Deer Killed by a Train.

Sunbury, Pa.—A full-grown, buck deer was killed by a passenger train near here. The animal jumped in front of the locomotive, the crew said, apparently trying to get to the Susquehanna river nearby. The animal was dressed and sent to the Mary M. Packer hospital, Sunbury.

Find Manganese Ore in Africa.
